WORLD COURT WILL CONSIDER CUSTOMS PACT

Great Powers, Austria to Seek Advisory Opinion on Vexing Problem.

RUSSIAN COMMISSAR STARTLES GATHERING

Red Officer Urges Economic Nonaggression Treaty for All Nations.

Geneva, May 18 (A.P.).—Two major events burst upon the international stage today. The great European powers and Austria agreed to send the controverted Austro-German customs union question to the World Court; and Maxim Litvinoff, Russian commissar of foreign affairs, invited the capitalistic world to join the Soviet government in a multilateral treaty of economic nonaggression.

Judicial action on the Austro-German accord, which has rent Europe with disputes during the last two months, was decided in a session of the League of Nations council. On the proposal of Foreign Minister Arthur Henderson, of Great Britain, The Hague tribunal will be asked to give an advisory opinion on the legality of the scheme for economic partnership between the two Teutonic states.

These two neighbors temporarily allayed fears of France and Czechoslovakia by engaging to refrain from further negotiations until the court gives its opinion and the league council takes action thereupon.

Quick Action to Be Urged.

According to the proposal, which was indorsed by Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister; Dr. Johann Schober, Austrian foreign minister; Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, The Hague court will be asked to take the problem under consideration as an urgent matter and return its advisory judgment as soon as possible, probably during the summer.

Expedition was urged on behalf of Germany and Austria, who are anxious to resume their negotiations for accomplishing the customs merger if the court's opinion is favorable. Spokesmen for Germany, Austria and France took occasion before the council to support their disputed claims.

Foreign Minister Schober said the scheme touched neither economic nor political independence of Austria. On the other hand, he said, if guarantors of Austria's independence defeated her sovereign right to make treaties, they themselves would gravely compromise Austrian independence.

Treaty Violation Charged.

M. Briand maintained that the project would be a violation of the Treaty of St. Germain and the Geneva protocol of 1922. He reiterated France's fears lest a political union eventually result.

Foreign Minister Curtius, welcoming the move to send the problem to The Hague, said "The limited character of our customs union project—three years—demonstrates that it is not a limit either politically or economically."

Council debate on the subject was not finished today, but the action was made certain by the agreement of those chiefly concerned.

Litvinoff's startling proposal came in the afternoon session of the Pan-European commission, which is dividing time with the council sessions. The Soviet minister pictured Russia's steady economic development while the whole capitalistic world groans under the depression.

Red Menace Charges Scouted.

He laughed at charges that Russian exports are depressing world markets. It is not by anti-Soviet campaigns that capitalist states can recover, he said, but they may mitigate their distresses by contracting commercial relations with the Soviet Union. Not preferential tariffs, but equal treatment for all is the need, in his view.

Fundamental laws of supply and demand still reign, he said, and he suggested drafting of a general treaty providing compulsory selling of goods in home markets at the same prices as in foreign markets.

War debts and military establishments were indicted vigorously by the stocky Soviet leader, who spoke in English. Tariff competition designed to relieve economic woe of capitalistic countries merely works to increase their grievous situation, he asserted.

In closing, Litvinoff presented the Soviet proposal for Europe's economic rehabilitation in the form of a general protocol which he urged should be opened for signature to all states throughout the world.

Purchasing Power Called Need.

"To mitigate world depression you must increase purchasing power of

WORLD BANK PASSES EXPECTED DEPOSITS

Directors Told Sum Exceeds $400,000,000; Gather in Switzerland.

Basle, Switzerland, May 19 (A.P.).—Directors of the World Bank for International Settlements, meeting today, were cheered to learn that the deposits of the "baby" institution now exceed $400,000,000.

The figure was not made public, but it was confirmed for the Associated Press by a high official of the bank.

This sum is far in excess of the expectations, and it clearly shows, according to the belief here, that the World Bank is becoming something more than a mere depository for the central banks of various nations, so that even if the reparations payments should later be put on some other basis, or cease entirely, the bank would still be certain to continue to function.

The directors also identified themselves today with the conclusions of the banks' Brussels committee, with regard to the desirability of creating additional facilities for financing international trade by the granting of middle-term credits. Beyond this declaration, however, the board merely referred the report back to the committee "for further study of measures which could be adopted for realizing these aims."

It was learned the World Bank has agreed to participate in moves to put the Austrian bank, Creditanstalt, back upon its feet. The initiative, however, it was decided, must come from the League of Nations committee for control of Austrian loans.

The report was that the Bank for International Settlements had agreed to help form a consortium for floating an issue of approximately $21,000,000 in Austrian treasury certificates, of which approximately $14,000,000 would be used for salving the Creditanstalt and the remainder for strengthening the reserves of the Austrian government.

These financiers of twenty-four nations centered attention also on the expected recommendations of the report which the bank's American president, Gates W. McGarrah, will lay before the meeting tomorrow.

The report is understood to urge creation of committees on credits and money and exchange, the former with a view to finding means to convert short-term credits into long-term obligations. The bank's principal task is to facilitate Germany's reparations payments, and the Germans are arguing that only long-term credits can help her economic situation and en-

TWO CAPITAL MEN MISSING IN SINKING

One Other Thought Drowned Also as Boat Is Cast Up in Rhode Island.

Newport, R. I., May 18 (U.P.).—Three members of the crew of a barge attached to the naval torpedo station on Gould Island, in Narragansett Bay, were believed to have been drowned when a small boat in which they went rowing Saturday night capsized.

Those missing are Ship's Cook George Frederick Wilson, 22, and Coxswain Edward A. Norton, 32, both of Washington, D. C., and Michael John Hrapek, 22, of Springfield, Mass., all members of the crew of torpedo barge No. 4.

The three planned to return to the barge after a short sail, since two of them were scheduled to have 48 hours' shore leave, starting Sunday. When they failed to report back, searching parties were organized.

The search was fruitless until today, when the crew of a naval power boat found the missing craft, overturned, washed up on the shore of Prudence Island, about 4 miles northwest of Gould Island.

Lieut. Paul Roswell, in charge of the air base at Gould Island, flew low over the woody island in a seaplane, but the men were not sighted.

Robber Gets $300 At Tivoli Theater

Armed Man Overlooks $3,000 in Cage After Holding Up Office.

An armed robber held up the manager and assistant manager of the Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth street and Park road, last night and escaped with $300. The money was taken from a safe in the theater's office after the holdup man had forced Stephen L. Eilbacher, the manager, to open it.

Mr. Eilbacher and J. W. Laycock, his assistant, were leaving their office for the cashier's cage when they were accosted. Between $3,000 and $4,000, constituting the day's receipts, was in the cage and missed by the bandit, who fled after robbing the office.

The theater executives were warned not to move for ten minutes by their assailant, who was unmasked.

Patriotic Leaders Indorse Project for District Flag

Chief of Veteran Groups, National Guard and Public Officials Agree Emblem Such as All States Have Would Stimulate Loyalty.

William L. Thomas, commander of the District of Columbia department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, yesterday accepted The Post's invitation to serve with other civic leaders in selecting a flag for the District.

Mr. Thomas warmly indorsed the contest sponsored by The Post, declared it of mutual interest to school children and grown-ups, and suggested that the present time is particularly appropriate "in view of widespread pacifist propaganda."

He will serve on a committee with Dr. B. C. MacNeil, departmental commander of the American Legion of the District; Gen. Anton Stephan, commander of the National Guard in the area comprising the District, Maryland, Virginia and part of Pennsylvania, and Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and parks and leader in local and national patriotic activities.

Additional appointments will be made to the committee as acceptances are received from others taking prominent roles in local civic movements.

Response yesterday to The Post's contest announcement disclosed broad interest in the movement. Every mail brought in fresh entries and numerous designs deemed appropriate for a District of Columbia emblem.

All of the contestants expressed enthusiasm for the contest. Some voiced astonishment that there is no official flag for the Nation's Capital, even

SOLDIERS FIRE ON MOB AROUND JAIL IN GEORGIA

Tear Gas Is Used on Cro Seeking Man Held as Attacker.

3 MORE GUARD UNITS EN ROUTE TO SCENE

One Person Thought Wounded During Shooting; Situation Called Serious.

Elberton, Ga., May 18 (A.P.).—National Guard men opened fire tonight and also used tear gas bombs to drive back a mob which attempted to attack the county jail, where a Negro is under arest, suspected of attacking a white woman. One man was believed wounded.

Col. G. P. O'Keeffe estimated the crowd at 1,500 persons, and described the situation as "very serious."

Three additional National Guard companies at Atlanta were en route here to reinforce the machine gun company and headquarters company which late this afternoon went on duty after a crowd demonstrated in front of the jail.

Situation Called Serious.

The office of Sheriff S. G. Seymour estimated the crowd at 2,000 and said it had quieted down after the guardsmen had driven them from the courthouse square.

"The situation here is very serious; we have had to open fire," said Col. O'Keeffe. He could not amplify the report that one person had been wounded.

The sheriff's office said it was impossible just now to get out of the courthouse to investigate the report because gas from the bombs was hovering around the place where the mob had been standing. A sheriff's deputy said several hundred members of the mob were armed with rifles and shotguns.

Two Companies on Duty.

Two companies of the Georgia National Guard, one a machine-gun outfit, were placed on duty around the jail late today after a crowd had demonstrated against the negro.

Sheriff Seymour said that before the troops were called some of the crowd got into the jail and down the corridor to the Negro's cell, but were restrained by appeals from the Rev. Henry Brookshire, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Elberton, and Police Chief W. H. Irvin.

Again the crowd attempted to reach the Negro, the sheriff said, but heeded appeals to reason.

Calling of the National Guard by Gov. L. G. Hardman was announced in Atlanta after telephone appeals from Sheriff Seymour, Chief Irvin and others, Adjut. Gen. Homer C. Parker said.

The Negro was arrested about noon today. The attack is said to have occurred last night.

DAY'S SLAYERS KNOWN, POLICE IN HUNT CLAIM

Early Arrests Predicted as Gunman Succumbs in Hospital.

INQUEST SCHEDULED AT DISTRICT MORGUE

Card Game Wrangle Blamed in Shooting; Victim Fired First, Report.

The two participants in the shooting affray in which Talley Day, 24-year-old gunman, was mortally wounded are expected to be in the hands of the police momentarily. Headquarters detectives, who know the identity of the two gunmen, early today were searching the "hide-outs" of the men in various sections of the city.

Day, who opened fire on the two men, who had "guyed" him for being a poor loser in a game of blackjack and had thrown a gin buck on the clothes of one man in a reputed speakeasy an dgambling resort on Sunday night, died at 6 o'clock yesterday morning in Emergency Hospital, a bullet in his brain.

An inquest into his death will be held today at the District Morgue, with three associates of Day who witnessed the gun battle offering testimony for the Government against the two men who fled after the fight.

Started in Card Game.

The events leading up to the slaying began in a card game in the afternoon at the alleged speakeasy on M street near Fifteenth street northwest, in which Day, the two sought in the killing and several others participated.

Day, according to Detectvie Sergt. John A. Flaherty, became enraged when others "guyed" him for "crabbing" because he was losing heavily. Day threw a gin buck on the clothes of one of the men now sought. A fight was averted at this stage and the group dispersed.

Later in the night the card game was resumed, during which Day bore the brunt of a "kidding match" because of his "crabbing" over his losings.

"If you can't lose don't play," one of the men told Day.

Threw Gin on Day.

At this point the man, in retaliation for Day's earlier act, doused him with a gin buck, saying, "That makes us even."

Day then drew a .32-caliber revolver form his pocket, the police sadi, as the other players started for the door.

The gin thrower now sought was near the door of the rear room on the third floor when Day pointed his gun toward him.

"Don't do that," the man's companion shouted, and as Day opened fire he also fired a bullet striking Day in the temple. The two men fled from the place.

Carlton G. Williams, 24 years old, of V street near Fifteenth street southeast; Joseph Demar, 21 years old, of M street near Fifteenth street northwest, who witnessed the shooting, and John C. Kelly, 31 years old, a colored porter, were held for investigation by police.

Both of the men sought, police said, are well known bootleggers and small time racketeers. One of the Air Army to Attempt Dayton-Chicago Hop

Planes Made Ready for Ambitious Program by 500,000 Flying Hours; Attack Ship, Carrying Four Guns, Shown in Exhibit.

Fairfield Airport, Dayton, Ohio, May 18 (A.P.).—Half a million flying hours without injury to a man, the remarkable record established by the Army Air Corps since its 670 planes began to practice for the annual maneuvers here, will be staked tomorrow against the hazards of a 250-mile flight to Chicago.

Cross-country trips from every border and coast, practice flying and aerial reviews were completed today in preparation for the most ambitious program ever attempted in the air by any nation—a parade of wingpower which will criss-cross the Eastern Coast and visit all its principal cities within the next ten days.

Weary hours of arduous practice flights ended today with a review of the 500 military ships which showed in greater compactness and more perfect alignment the results of the past three days' work.

"G-4," the Army's section of maintenance and supplies, functioned at top speed this afternoon and on into the night to preen the wings of America's war birds against tomorrow's flight. Barring unexpected bad weather, the bombers will begin taking off at 11 a. m., the attack, pursuit and observation ships will follow, and the last of them will be on the wing by 1:30 p. m.

Once off the ground, the force will split and take various routes across Indiana, flying west to Indianapolis, north to Fort Wayne or northwest between the two extremes. The armada will land at four Chicago airports between 1 and 4 p. m. Planes for the press, ambulance service and enlisted men will precede them.

After an aerial review over Chicago extending for miles along the Lake Michigan Shore, the main body of the division will return here Wednesday. The take-off for the East is scheduled for Thursday.

On the experimental line at Wright Field stand two planes which, manufacturers say, will answer the dreams of Army aviators for faster and better protected ships.

While it is possible they will not prove feasible, officers believe, these experimental planes have great possibilities and some ideas may be gleaned from them.

One, an all-metal, low-winged attack ship, carries four guns, two

CLERK PAY INCREASES PUT OFF INDEFINITELY IN HOOVER ESTIMATES

Wage Cuts Regarded As Breach, Doak Says

Secretary Says Industry Is Making No Reductions; That Hoover Relies Upon Pact of 1929 on Pay Roll Scales.

(Associated Press.)

The administration was said yesterday by Secretary Doak to feel that general wge reductions would be a violation of confidence by industry, releasing employes to demand wage increases.

The Labor Secretary said there had been no revocation of the agreement obtained in 1929 by President Hoover from labor and industry binding them to maintain existing wage levels during the depression. He added he had heard of no proposals for general decreases.

Meanwhile Fred C. Croxton, acting chairman of the President's emergency committee for employment, held the statement of President Green of the American Federation of Labor that employes would be justified to combat wage cuts with strikes did not presage any widespread labor controversies.

Neither had discussed the Green statement with President Hoover, although Croxton spoke as he left the White House after taking up routine affairs. He said capital and labor had worked in complete harmony for nearly two years and he saw no indication that they were at a parting of the ways. He predicted, however, continuance of the depression would bring additional labor disturbances.

Secretary Doak, who had just returned from Houston, Tex., where he spoke at a meeting of the railroad brotherhoods, said he had not been advised formally of Green's statement. He had heard reports, without confirmation, of general wage cuts, but said he had received definite assurance from the heads of major railroads that they contemplated no sweeping reductions in pay, despite the recent curtailment of their revenues.

Secretary Doak believed the reductions shown recently in compilations of the Labor Department were con-

MARTIAL LAW ENDS IN MADRID SECTOR

Spanish Capital Reported Tranquil; Stocks Rise as Bourse Reopens.

Madrid, May 18 (A.P.).—The pressure of martial law was lifted from Madrid tonight, following a meeting of the cabinet, at which it was decided the city was again "tranquil" after the riots of last week. The order was immediately sent to the headquarters of the captain general and became effective at once. The cabinet made no announcement as to when it will withdraw martial law in the provinces.

President Alcala Zamora called a cabinet conference today, which, it generally is believed, may reveal the nature of the papal communication to Madrid, "expected to be in the form of a vigorous protest against alleged laxity of the republican gov-

14 Hurt by Fourth Bombing at Lisbon

Three Earlier Explosions, Same Day, Injure 15; Paper Wrecked.

Lisbon, May 18 (A.P.).—Fourteen persons, including a number of students, were injured tonight in the fourth bombing in Lisbon today.

The bomb was hurled into a group of students as they were leaving Rocio Station, where they had met a party of colleagues from the universities at Oporto and Coimbra, who came to Lisbon for the celebration in honor of President Carmona yesterday.

Fifteen persons were injured by the explosion of three bombs earlier today while crowds were returning from the celebration to their homes. The fury of the people rose to a high pitch. They gesticulated with their fists and shouted "Down with the Communists! Down with the Revolution!" A group of students marched upon the plant of the newspaper Republica, shouting wildly. They wrecked the plant and set piles of paper afire.

BORAH RAPS SILVER VIEWS OF COOLIDGE

Senator Says Governments, Not Machinery's Use, Have Debased Metal.

(Associated Press.)

Taking issue with former President Coolidge, Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee said yesterday the low price of silver is due to "a deliberate effort" by governments to debase silver and not to overproduction.

The former President, in his daily newspaper article, yesterday advocated an international silver conference and said silver had been cheapened by the increased use of machinery and invention in its production.

Senator Borah, who recently demanded that Great Britain abandon her gold standard policy in India and called for governmental action to solve the problem, replied to the Coolidge article in the following formal statement:

"Former President Coolidge said this morning: 'Like so many other commodities, silver has been cheapened by the increased use of machinery and invention in its production.' Something besides increased use of machinery of production must be considered in accounting for the present debasement of silver. Since 1919 the average yearly output of silver has been slightly above 230,000,000 ounces. The average yearly consumption during that time has been about 265,000,000 ounces. The consumption has been greater than the output.

"There has been no improved machinery or inventions for the production of silver of any moment during that time. But some things have happened which may well account for the present debasement of silver.

"Since that time England called in and remelted silver coinage, reissuing the metal with silver content reduced to five-tenths instead of nine-tenths.

"Since that time France withdrew all of its silver coinage, issuing paper, brass, nickel and copper instead. Austria took action along similar lines.

"In 1925 India was put on a gold bullion standard. At that time India was taking about 40 per cent of the world's supply. The world's silver prices sank 10 per cent in 1926. In 1925 silver stood at 69.07 cents. It has since gone to 27 cents an ounce.

"I grant there has been an over-

London and Capital Youth Hit War in Telephone Talk

English Boy Repeats Messages Received From Over Empire, While Washington Student Conveys Good Will of 48 States of Union.

(Associated Press.)

From a table in the Senate foreign relations committee room, Robert Hild, deep-voiced schoolboy, telephoned to London a message of international good will relayed round the world yesterday by youth of the two hemispheres.

Chairman Borah of the Senate committee welcomed Hild and nine other youngsters who consummated the conversation, celebrating good-will day, anniversary of the first Hague conference meeting in 1899.

Education officials an organized peace advocates listened while the youths forwarded the greeting that had traveled 10,000 miles between 48 State capitals, beginning in California.

"So glad you're here for this, Robert," Senator Borah said, as he gave the spokesman the chairman's place at the table. "It's a great occasion."

Previously, the Idahoan said in a statement that for peace "we can not depend upon diplomats and the ways of governments; there must be organized public opinion, and that must come though the education of the youth."

Excitement shone from the children's faces when the telephone rang and the voice of John Henry Bradley, London school, said, "Hello, Washington?"

President Foresees New Annual Deficits to Follow Present.

SALARIES FOR 1933 WILL BE UNCHANGED

Proviso Is Suggested Raises Will Be Made Later as Revenues Permit.

By J. B. McDONNELL.

Faced not only with a deficit at the end of the current fiscal year but with another at the end of the next and possibly the year after, the administration has determined to carry on indefinitely its policy of refusing any pay increases to Government employes.

The policy adopted for the current fiscal year against granting any salary increases within grades will be carried forward into the next fiscal year, which begins July 1.

President Hoover and the members of his Cabinet are represented as feeling that every dollar saved in this way represents a reduction of the actual and prospective deficits confronting the Federal Treasury because of the business depression.

New Salaries to Be Same.

Estimates, now under preparation by the various departments for the fiscal year 1933, are to be made up on the salary basis approved by Congress for the next fiscal year.

This means that President Hoover has temporarily abandoned the salary plan for Government employes which he submitted to the last session of Congress in the budget for the next fiscal year.

That plan called for increasing the Government payroll by $14,500,000 over a three-year period to bring under-average salaries now being paid employes up to amounts specified in law, but not in appropriation measures, for their work.

Wood's Plan Followed.

The President proposed an appropriation of $4,500,000 more for salaries for the coming fiscal year, which represented approximately 30 per cent of the total necessary to bring under-average salaries up to grade.

This plan was bitterly fought by Representative Will R. Wood (Republican), of Indiana, chairman of the House appropriations committee, who also sought to have Congress approve an amendment to the appropriation measures prohibiting salary increases within grades. Although this amendment was defeated, the executive branch of the Government has put it into practice for the current fiscal year and has determined to follow the same plan in the next fiscal year.

The plan to bring these under-average salaries up to amounts specified in the classification law will not be revived in the estimates which now are under preparation by the executives of departments for submission to Congress in December for enactment of appropriations bills for 1933.

1933 May Bring Changes.

The estimates will carry no moneys for increases in salaries of Government employes, but will be the same as carried in the appropriation acts for the coming fiscal year.

This does not mean, however, that the administration definitely has shut the door to adjustment of the Government salary situation. It is felt that 1933 is a considerable distance away and no one can prophesy now just what will be the course of governmental income in that year. Unless there is an increase, not now definitely foreseen, there will be a deficit that year, too, which must be met, in part, by reduction of Government expenditures.

Should the business depression end and a new boom set in and Government revenues increase, the policy of refusing pay increases within grades will immediately by abandoned.

Plan Depends on Revenue.

Should revenues increase adequately to justify it, supplemental estimates will be drafted and submitted to Congress providing for additional funds for salaries to eliminate existing discrepancies and injustices due to variations of salaries paid employes and the large number of employes receiving less than the average salary prescribed by classification laws enacted by Congress.

Recently it was announced that the deficit for the current fiscal year would exceed $900,000,000. On June 15, however, another installment of the income tax is due, and the returns are expected to cut the deficit down to about $700,000,000.

The President hopes to wipe out a good part of this deficit in the fiscal year of 1932, which begins July 1. Whether he succeeds depends upon how much can be saved in expenditures and how much is received in the way of revenue.

He already has announced that a tax increase will not be necessary if Congress and the people generally cooperate with the administration in holding down appropriations.

fined mostly to the smaller businesses and said the larger industries have not reduced, but are responding "fairly well" to the insistence of the administration that the wage level be maintained.

Figures released by the department last week showed an increase during April in fifteen industrial groups of 0.2 per cent in employment, and a decrease of 1.5 per cent in pay rolls.

Secretary Doak emphasized reductions in both employment and pay rolls had been normal during the ten years covered by the department's statistics. He said during the last week six different controversies between employes and employers had been adjusted with a return to the old wage scale. The depression thus far had been singularly free from strikes, he said, with the agreement holding between labor and capital.

Board Policies Studied By Farm Economists

(Associated Press.)

A group of farm economists is examining the policies of the Farm Board as they relate to agriculture generally. Chairman Stone said the economists were invited here by the Board so that it might get a cross section of opinion from those close to the crop producer.

"We have welcmed," he said, "the frank discussions of these men, some of who are opposed to our policies." He declined to say whether their findings would have a bearing on future board activities, and to make pibiic their names.

DRAFT OF PROPERTY IN WARTIME URGED

Representative Frear Asks Amendment to Limit Army Conscription.

(Associated Press.)

Conscription of wealth and property in a future war, if man power is drafted, was demanded before the war policies commission yesterday by Representative Frear, formerly chairman of a House committee which investigated World War profiteering.

The Wisconsin Republican opposed all conscription of men for military service except in defense of the Nation, however, and proposed a constitutional amendment to prevent drafting an Army for duty elsewhere than on the North American continent.

Prof. Robert M. Lovett, of the University of Chicago, told the commission the Government experiments in controlling industry during the World War should be tried out to remedy existing economic conditions.

A third witness, Clyde B. Atchison, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, recommended governmental control rather than ownership of transportation facilities in time of war and proposed giving the Interstate Commerce Commission summary power over rates. He said governmental possession and operation of the transportation system should be "a last resort."

Is Declared Unjust.

Mr. Frear said the conscription of men for military service at a dollar a day was unjust unless property also was drafted without profit. He characterized conscription of an Army, except for home defense, as "an extreme militaristic, autocratic policy."

The Wisconsin representative attacked War Department mobilization plans, which, he said, called for conscripting an Army of 4,000,000 men in time of war without drafting property. He said the Army plans would not promote peace.

Secretary Hurley, chairman of the commission, charged the witness was doing the Army plan a "grave injustice" and said "economic chaos" would result from conscription of property.

Mr. Frear also proposed a constitutional amendment to prevent Congress from declaring war without a referendum of the people.

Prof. Lovett said at the close of the World War there was a strong feeling that the governmental control of basic enterprises should not be abandoned.

"The experiments undertaken in the stress of war seemed to have a lesson for times of peace,' he said.

Threatened by Competition.

"They seemed to point toward a possible reorganization of national economy for the increase of efficiency in production and distribution, the elimination of waste, the equalization of risks and losses, as well as of opportunities and profits. Some of us feel that it was a great error to scrap the machinery which had been set and which was working every day more efficiently."

Prof. Lovett said the position of American productive enterprise is threatened by competition with systems having an advantage in the matter of direction and control such as the Soviet economic experiment.

Asserting the welfare of the mass of people is a by-product of prosperity of "big business" and pointing to the hardships of unemployment, Dr. Lovett said, "The people have a right to look to the Government for that direction and control of the national economy which was so necessary and so practicable in time of war."

Southern Pines Hotel Is Destroyed by Fire

Southern Pines, N. C., May 18 (A.P.).—The Southern Pines Hotel, one of the oldest tourist hotels of this North Carolina resort, was destroyed by fire early tonight. The loss was estimated by owners at $200,000.

Fire was discovered breaking through the roof shortly before 7 o'clock. The building, a wooden structure about 35 years old, burned rapidly, although fire apparatus from Pinehurst, Aberdeen and Carthage assisted Southern Pines firemen.

Samuel Vauclain Is 75.

Philadelphia, May 18 (A.P.).—Samuel M. Vauclain, the "gray-haired veteran of Baldwin's," was 75 today. One of the best-known locomotive builders in the country, he spent his birthday at his desk attending to his multifarious duties as chairman of the board of Baldwin Locomotive Works.

men, police believe, may have been wounded by a shot from Day's gun and they have instructed hospitals and doctors to be on the alert for any one asking for treatment for suspicious wounds.

Day has been arrested more than a score of times for various violations of the law, including transportation of liquor and housebreaking. A few days ago he was arrested and released in connection with the attack on Dr. Don Carlos Leiva, charge d'affaires of the Legation of El Salvador, during a liquor raid on the legation.

Day was known mostly because of his connection with a gambling resort near the District, where he had been employed as a door man. In 1928 he was arrested and released in connection with a shooting in the Blue Grass Inn in Maryland, but was released when William Bailey, the wounded man, refused to testify.

He is survived by his wife, Myrtle Day, who lives on P street near Fifteenth street northwest; his mother and father and three brothers. His parents live on Twenty-Eighth street near N street northwest.

able her to meet her reparations schedule.

The report is also expected to recommend a 6 per cent dividend.

The bank, known generally in Europe as "Bis" was inaugurated May 20, 1930, under the Young plan. Although its principal routine duty is administration of the monthly reparations payments by Germany, such funds now represent less than 20 per cent of its total assets, which amount to $372,000,000.

Governors of the central banks of most of the nations which participated in the World War are here for the meeting.

supply of silver, but not an overproduction. And the oversupply has been brought about by governmental action in debasing silver and thereby dumping upon the world market the silver which has been hoarded through hundreds of years.

"It seems to me perfectly clear that the present condition of silver is not due to overproduction, but to the action of governments in a deliberate effort to debase silver."

Thousands Lose Jobs As Silver Price Drops

Thousands of miners in the Northwest have been thrown out of work, due to the downward trend in the price of silver, Compton I. White, northern Idaho mining official, told President Hoover yesterday during a half-hour conference at the White House. Mr. White urged that the proposed international conference to stabilize the price of silver be hastened that the mining situation be relieved.

The Westerner pointed out that the Northwest is dependent on the markets of the Orient for many of its products, and that exports from the Pacific Coast had fallen to less than half since the metal slump began. Mr. White stated that President Hoover assured him that the issue was being given careful attention, and the delay in calling a conference was caused by the chaotic situation in China and India.

AIR ARMY WILL TRY FLIGHT TO CHICAGO

mounted in the wings, one which fires through the propeller, and one manned by the observer or bomber in the rear cockpit. It is said to be capable of 192 miles an hour and a cruising radius greater than the present type of attack plane.

The monoplane feature is new. Officers are keen on its possibilities for greater visibility for pilot and observer.

The bomber, a fast trimotored ship, is said to be capable of a speed of 125 miles an hour loaded. It is reported capable of carrying nearly four tons when fully loaded. One innovation, which officers believe will add to its speed is the fact that the bomb racks are inside the ship instead of under the fuselage. This is said to cut down wind resistance. Manufacturers say it is possible for the ship to travel a great distance on any two of its three motors. The ship carries a gunner forward of the pilot and two guns in the after portion.

One of these guns can be used to protect the rudder, while the third is capable of protecting the undertail surfaces.

No ship accepted by the Army for experimental work has an easy life and when it leaves the material division of the air service it is either usable or junk. On this line are innumerable ships that can not make the grade. Some go into spins and others refuse to answer to the stick. When one of the defects is found a lengthy report is forwarded to the manufacturer and he takes the ship back. Some crash, but the majority of those with new contrivances are returned for redesigning.

Famous Hotels Use American Ice

The question of how ice shall be supplied to a large hotel is extremely important. Ice is used in such vast quantities—both in the refrigerating rooms and for table service—that the most economical and most satisfactory method of obtaining the ice must be found.

An honest study of comparative costs has convinced many hotel managers that ice can not be manufactured in a hotel as cheaply as it can be bought from the American Ice Company.

The dinner guests at these hotels enjoy the gay tinkle of pure, crystal-clear American Ice in their glasses—ice without a trace of cloudiness.

Hoover Reelection Predicted by Allen

Political Conditions Are Better in Kansas, Former Senator Says.

(Associated Press.)

Former Senator Henry J. Allen, of Kansas, said yesterday that in his opinion President Hoover undoubtedly would be renominated and reelected.

Political conditions, he said, are improving rapidly in Kansas and the Middlewest. He added the election last November was a protest vote and that the sober second thought of the people would not permit any repudiation of Mr. Hoover because of the business depression. Mr. Allen indicated he is contemplating running again for the Senate in 1932.

"Things are still a little foggy," he said, "but I am out blowing my fog horn every now and then to let the people know I am still around. I had to take a licking last November lying down because I was in the hospital, and I want to find out if they can lick me when I am standing up."

Mr. Allen said Vice President Curtis planned to visit Kansas in June and spend the month touring the State. After his visit, he said, he thought the Vice President would decide whether he would run again for the Vice Presidency or retire and run for his old seat in the Senate.

MARTIAL LAW ENDS IN MADRID SECTOR

ernment in preventing the burning of churches in the recent anticlerical demonstrations.

Moves to suppress priests, accused of political activity, continued today. Following the government example in expelling Bishop Mateo Mucica from the Vitoria Diocese, the Manzanapese El Real town council met today and discussed the possibility of proceeding against Father Juan Flores Gutierrez, parochial priest, whose Sunday sermon denounced the republic as the author of the burning. The outcome of these deliberations was not announced.

Meanwhile, Spain's woman prison director, Victoria Kent, announced that nuns who customarily supplied prisoners' wants from stores run on a concession basis will be given one month to clear their accounts and turn the commissariats over to her officers.

Republican troops continue picketing burned church establishments under orders to shoot to kill looters or those suspected of incendiarism. Minister of Interior Maura commented today as follows on rumors that extreme lefts in the government would not be satisfied until members of the Jesuit order at least are expelled:

"I think Jesuits have gathered at their ancient stronghold of Loyola awaiting developments. If they go, they will go voluntarily as the government has not asked or indicated their departure."

The Bourse, closed almost a week, reopened this afternoon with a strong tone. All listing improved and some stocks were up as much as 17 points from closing quotations before the antichurch riots.

(Associated Press.)

A formal denial of reports saying nuns and monks were beaten during the Spanish religious riots was issued yesterday by the Spanish Embassy on orders from the government at Madrid.

"The Spanish Embassy in Washington," a statement said, "has just received a cable from the Spanish government stating the information published by some American newspapers to the effect that during the recent disturbances in Spain some nuns were beaten in Madrid is not true. During the riots, the persons of monks and nuns did not receive any harm."

Catholic Professor Scores Those Who Failed to Vote Billions for Building.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 18.—President Hoover, Congress, labor and business leaders were taken to task here today by the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, for their failure to promote a three-billion-dollar public works program as an immediate remedy for the business depression.

Father Ryan, who is a professor of sociology at the Catholic University of America, and director of the department of social action, National Catholic Welfare Council, addressed the opening session of the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor at the Emerson Hotel. Approximately 150 delegates are attending the convention.

Father Ryan told them that the influence of labor unions in the world today is greater than in any preceding time since the industrial revolution; that this is true in the United States as well as Europe, and that it was indicated by the "pretty general acceptance of the union doctrine that wages should not be reduced in hard times."

"The immediate outlook for unemployed labor is darker than it has ever been in any previous depression," he said.

"Nearly two years after the beginning of the industrial decline," he asserted, "we see not the slightest indication of any improvement within the next three or four months. Indeed, conditions are more likely to be worse than better next September. If no definite improvement is under way by that time, there will be very little hope for better conditions before next spring. This will mean that the amount of suffering on account of unemployment next winter will be vastly greater than it was last winter, and that the means of providing relief through voluntary agencies will be greatly diminished."

Father Ryan argued that the most promising short-cut out of the business depression is offered only in a vast expenditure of public money for public works.

A measure was passed dividing the federation into a Baltimore City district, Maryland counties district and a District of Columbia district, and giving to each the right to select two vice presidents.

Asserting that "when she went through the ceremony she was in an intoxicated condition and did not realize the import of the steps she was taking" Mrs. Evaline F. Ford, yesterday filed a petition to have annulled her marriage to Charles Y. Ford.

BIG CIRCUS THRILLS CROWDS IN CAPITAL

Ringling-Barnum and Bailey Shows Have Novel Acts and Funny Clowns.

Two performances yesterday proved that the circus has lost none of its lure for residents of the Capital—young or old. Long before the spectacular parade of performers and wild animals started the round of festivities at the grounds, Fifth street and Florida avenue northeast, thousands had gathered beside the arena.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey, combined names which mean much to the old-time circus fan, brought a troup of performers to the city which put them far up on the claim to "the greatest show on earth," the slogan of circuses.

Some of the features of the circus this year include the act by Orland and Mara, in which Orland, with pretty Miss Mara clinging to his back, dives from the dome of the big top to land upon his chest on a toboggan chute.

There are plenty of clowns for the circus lovers. In fact, there are 100 of them by actual count. The human projectile, Hugo Zacchini, is back with the show and never fails to thrill the crowd with his act.

The flying Codonas, with Alfredo, the only man accomplishing a triple somersault in midair, form another of the feature acts. Alfredo Codona is the widower of Lillian Leitzel, noted circus star, who hurtled to her death during a performance in Vienna a few months ago.

Two additional performances of the circus will be held in Washington today. The matinee will begin at 2 o'clock and the night performance at 8 o'clock.

Avenue Widening Moves Landmark

High-Water Post Marking Famous 1889 Flood Being Switched.

Another old famous land mark of the District is being moved to make way for progress. The weather-scarred sandstone post on which the high-water mark of the famous flood of 1899 is chiseled, located at the southwest corner of the intersection of Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue, is being moved about 25 feet south of its present location to make way for the widening of the avenue.

This old post is one of three marking the entrance to the Mall, two of them being authentic and the third, on the southeast corner, being a fake. The original posts are sandstone throughout and have the words "High Water Mark, June 2" chiseled into them. The date, 1889, has worn away on both posts. The fake one is built of bricks and covered over with cement to imitate the genuine sandstone.

The moving of this old high-water mark recalls the horror and tremendous property damage caused when the dam of the Conemaugh Lake gave way after the devastating Johnstown flood, inundating the Georgetown River front and the entire district south of Pennsylvania avenue.

across th Atlantic Ocean." Bradley began, "but I have no time . . . Oh, I say, can you hear me, Washington?"

"Sure, go ahead!" Robert responded.

Then into ear phones came John's transmission of messages that had traveled to London from Java, from New Zealand from a dozen European and Asiatic countries.

"I am very glad indeed to be able . . . can you hear me, London?" Robert came back.

"Very well, indeed," the children heard, smiling.

"War is out of date," Robert said, adding, "perhaps next year we will be able to see each other as we talk."

The conversations were arranged by the World Federation of Education Associations, in cooperation with the National Council for Prevention of War. Before the final exchange, the States' greeting was spoken by the children to Mexico, Canada and Chile.

NIGHT CLUB SUICIDE TO BE BURIED TODAY

Rites for Policeman Taylor Not Yet Set; Garbett Held Improving.

Two tragic funerals remain to mark the strange case of Robert S. Montgomery, 27, who early Sunday morning ran amuck at Le Paradis with a .45-caliber pistol, seriously wounding the manager of the place, slaying a policeman and then ending his own life.

One of the funerals will be held today from a fashionable New York hotel, and impressive rites will be said for young Montgomery, clubman and social registeritte of New York and Boston. The obsequies will take place at the Hotel Lombardi, home of Mrs. E. Shaw Montgomery, the man's mother, and his sister, Miss Elizabeth Montgomery.

A time for the other rites has not been definitely set, but, through necessity, they will be extremely simple. Thes eservices will be said for Patrolman Jesse Taylor, of the Second Precinct, who met Montgomery on the steps of the night club, and who fell dead from two bullets dealt by the young man's gun.

Widow Bowed by Grief.

The widow of the policeman, bowed by grief, ha sbeen unable to set a definite hour for the funeral, but the services will probably be held Thursady. The little family in Washington—Taylor's widow, his son, Wayne, 16, and his sister, Mrs. Florence Laughton—are awaiting the arrival of a second sister, Mrs. Carrie Ringenberg, from Chillicothe, Ohio, before completing plans for the funeral.

Yesterday the widow mother, in company with Mrs. Anna Barker, who lives with her, visited Cedar Hill Cemetery to purchase a lot. The planned to have the interment there.

Col. Robert H. Montgomery, father of young Montgomery, yesterday stated definitely from his home in New York that he had provided financially for the family of Patrolman Taylor. He declined to discuss the details of the arrangements.

Mrs. Taylor said that she had heard nothing from the Montgomery family and that she knew of no arrangements for herself, her son or mother.

Plans To Seek Job.

She is faced with the problem of supporting herself, her son and mother at their little home, 715 Madison street, with the only funds in sight a $1,700 insurance policy of the police department and $60 a month.

She plans to seek a job somewhere, and her young son also was preparing to look for work, although it might mean abandonment of his hopes for an education. Wayne realizes the importance of an education, but considers taking care of his mother more important than any amount of schooling.

Meanwhile, the third figure in the tragedy, Charles Garbett, the night club manager, was making a valiant fight for life at Emergency Hospital, and his attending physician, Dr. N. Norman Smiler, was optimistic over his chances for recovery.

Dr. Smilerd said his patient rested the better part of yesterday and seemed much improvbed last night. Barring complications he has better than an even chance for recovery, according to the physician. Garbett wsa shot through the lung by Montgomery after an argument over a table at the Club Chantecler.

It was also understood that Col. Montgomery was prepared to care for Garbett's expenses and had ordered the best of medical care for him, but those close tothe night club manager said yesterday that they had no definite word of such arrangements.

The triple shooting took place just outside of the dance floor of the Club Chantecler early Sunday morning after young Montgomery had made his third visit to the place and had resumed an argument over his desire to be placed at a table near the dance floor.

Montgomery had been at the night club with a party of four earlier in the evening. The party left and a young woman who was with him went to her home. Montgomery is said to have gone to his quarters at the exclusive Racquet Club, from which he returned to the Club Chantecler. There he asked for a table near the dance floor, but was refused by Garbett on the ground that the place was too crowded.

The young man is said to have left and on his return to have resumed his argument with Garbett. When the club manager still refused to give him the table he wanted young Montgomery pulled the automatic pistol from an arm holster and shot Garbett.

As the man collapsed to the floor the young man ran toward the steps leading to the club. He met Patrolman Taylor entering the place and shot him twice, the bullets taking effect under the policeman's heart.

On reaching the street Montgomery shot himself twice under the heart dying almost instantly.

Officials yesterday held the unofficial opinion that liquor and worry, the worry superinduced by the young man's attempts to pass the severe tests for certified public accountants, caused the tragedy.

Navy Will Rival Army Air Attack

Cruisers and Destroyers to Test Bay Defenses at Same Time.

(United Press.)

The spectacular display of 672 fighting aircraft, which the Army will send winging over the eastern part of the United States in the latter part of this month, will have competition from the Navy, it was learned yesterday.

As the giant air armada engages in mock combat over Philadelphia and Baltimore May 29, the Navy will launch a cruiser and destroyer attack against the coast defenses of Chesapeake Bay, water gateway to Baltimore and the National Capital.

The great guns of a cruiser division and two divisions of destroyers will add their clamor to the roar of the hundreds of planes, in a massed sea attack that is expected to provide a comprehensive test of the bay's shore defenses.

Navy officials said that the sea maneuvers will have no relation to the Army's air circus, but that the Navy would act in conjunction with coast defense units of the Army in the sea attack.

Federal Employe Hurt in Gas Blast

Peter Schroen Is Burned in Explosion at Severn River Cottage.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—His body severely burned as the result of an explosion of a gas-making apparatus which he had installed in the basement of his summer cottage at Herald Harbor, on Severn River, Peter Schroen, 62 years old, of 130 first street northwest, Washington, is in a precarious condition in Emergency Hospital, Annapolis, tonight. His chances of recovering are slim, according to Dr. Albert Anderson, who has been attending him.

Mr. Schroen, who is an employe of the Government Printing Office in Washington, had passed the weekend at the cottage. His wife returned to Washington last night. Mr. Schroen, it is said, went to the basement shortly before 7 o'clock this morning to heat some water. County authorities are of the opinion that there was a leak in the apparatus, for apparently as soon as Schroen struck a match, the explosion occurred. J. B. Shaw, living next door, heard the blast, and investigating, found the room filled with smoke and flame and Schroen was lying prostrate on the floor, his clothing on fire.

The injured man was hurried to the hospital while other neighbors subdued the flames. Mr. Schroen's wife, who was at the cottage with him yesterday, is employed in the Census Bureau in Washington.

P. Lorillard Company Combats Virginia Tax

Richmond, Va., May 18 (A.P.).—A hearing was given by the State corporation commission today on a petition by the P. Lorillard Co., of New Jersey, seeking relief from paying "entrance fee" tax on the basis of the amount of capital stock authorized rather than on the amount actually issued.

The provision of the State tax law specifically involved provides that the tax is to be computed on the authorized capital stock issue and that common stock of "no par" value is deemed to be of the value of $100 a share.

FORMER SENATOR CITED IN CONTEMPT

Walter Oliver Charged With Failure to Renew Bonds in Fairfax.

Walter Tansil Oliver, former State senator from the Thirtieth Virginia District and veteran Fairfax County attorney, yesterday was cited to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, in Fairfax County Circuit Court.

The citation was issued, according to court records, in connection with Mr. Oliver's alleged failure to execute a new bond in two cases, one in which he is special receiver for the estate in the case of Harry L. Oliver and others vs. Walton D. Oliver, and another in which he is special administrator in the estate of Carrie A. S. Burke. Original bond in the first case was $3,000 and the second $1,000.

Last May Judge McCarthy ordered Mr. Oliver to make an accounting in the cases to the court, giving him until September 21 to do so. Court records show that this accounting was not made.

As court opened this May a rule was issued, returnable yesterday, ordering Mr. Oliver to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt. Mr. Oliver was not in court, and is said to have sent word to Judge McCarthy that he was ill with whooping cough. A notation on the rule said that the case would be continued until the defendant appeared in court and answered it.

Two years ago Mr. Oliver was cited for contempt of court before Judge Howard W. Smith, precedessor of Judge McCarthy, and when he failed to appear in court to answer the citation, was fined $50. The case started over the attorney's action in a case in which his client was sent to jail for 45 days. Mr. Oliver later issued a public apology to Judge Smith.

GIBSON SEES HOOVER ON ARMS LIMITING

Direct and Efficient Plan of Cutting War Equipment Urged by Government.

(Associated Press.)

The most direct, efficient and reasonable limitation of armaments will be sought by the delegation which will represent the Washington Government at the League of Nations general disarmament conference.

With the arrival in the Capital yesterday of Hugh S. Gibson, Ambassador to Belgium, and for six years America's leading figure in the league's disarmament efforts, the United States entered actively into a period of preparation for a general disarmament conference.

After a brief discussion with State Department officials, the Ambassador lunched with the President, who has emphatically asserted his view that armaments could be further reduced. He is a White House guest.

Land Reduction Primary Aim.

The United States, under present indications, will enter the conference with primary attention directed toward reduction of land forces, and with a willingness to reduce its fighting forces proportionately as low as other nations.

Since the London naval treaty, limiting the naval forces, the United States, Great Britain and Japan, and agreed to in part by France and Italy, covers some nine-tenths of the world's naval forces, the present attitude of the United States is that the attention of a conference should be directed toward other fighting forces, particularly land armaments.

There appeared to be no change in the attitude previously adhered to, that the United States opposes the principle of budgetary limitation so far as its forces are concerned. The American Government, however, would not oppose any agreement using the budgetary limitation principle if applied to other powers. The preference of the United States is for direct limitation.

London Pact Guarded.

Any efforts to interfere with the London naval treaty probably would be sharply opposed by the United States, since it was felt that controversial questions might be stirred up by such action.

Jay Pierrepont Moffat probably will be the secretary of the American delegation. He has been ordered to report to the State Department from Berne, Switzerland, where he is attached to the American legation as first secretary.

Ambassador Gibson is looked upon as an almost certain delegate and possibly head of the American delegation. There was some speculation in official circles that Senator Dwight W. Morrow (Republican), New Jersey, a delegate to the London naval conference, might be prevailed upon to be a delegate.

HAGUE WILL WEIGH CUSTOMS TREATY

the masses and so increase consumption of goods," the Russian foreign minister said. "The French proposal for rebuilding by setting up cartels is unsound. Steel and other cartels did not prevent depression in these industries. The crisis calls for directly opposite treatment.

"Capitalistic countries wishing to mitigate economic distress ought to establish economic relations with Russia. Some newspapers and individuals charge there is political purpose behind our economic policy. I can not conceive anything sillier. The time has come to recognize the Soviet Union as a fact to be reckoned with. It can not be dissolved by incantations and abuse.

"Division of Europe into economic blocs is destined to produce warfare and not international collaboration. Group division only means chaos."

Proof of Sincerity Claimed.

Proposing the economic nonaggression pact, Litvinoff declared such a plan is proof of Russia's readiness to pursue the ideal of peaceful development without attack on other states.

The protocol reads as follows:

"Representatives of the undersigned European countries, recognizing that:

"(a) The mitigation of the crisis which has overtaken the national economy of most countries requires, in addition to the abstention from war as a means for solution of international conflicts, the complete cessation of all forms of economic aggression, both avowed and concealed, by any countries or groups of countries;

"(b) The cessation of economic aggression is an essential condition for peaceful cooperation of states in the sphere of economics, irrespective of their political-economic systems;

Mistrust Cessation Seen.

"(c) The cessation of economic aggression would help to put an end to the present atmosphere of mistrust, uncertainty and alarm weighing so heavily upon the economic position;

"(d) And hoping that all other countries, inspired by their example, will join this protocol, have decided to recommend that their governments sign the following protocol:

"First—Contracting parties once more solemnly confirm the principle proclaimed at the international economic conference of 1927 of peaceful coexistence of countries, irrespective of their social, political and economic systems.

"Second—In accordance with clause 2 the parties undertake not to adopt in their relations with each other any discrimination whatsoever and regard adoption in any of their countries of a special attitude militating against the interests of one or any of the countries subscribing to this protocol as incompatible with its principles.

"This protocol to become effective when any parties deposit their ratifications to the president of the commission, M. Briand."

Supreme Court Holds Chocolate Is Candy

(Associated Press.)

Sweet chocolate and sweet milk chocolate, in blocks, bars and small pieces, to be retailed in stores, were declared by the Supreme Court yesterday to have been properly taxed by the Federal Government as candy under the Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921.

The suit was brought by the Government against the Hershey, the Klein, the Wilbur-Suchard and the York Chocolate Companies, which paid $8,000,000 as excise taxes on the sales of such chocolate between 1918 and 1924. The Federal District Court decided in favor of the Government, but the Third Circuit Court of Appeals found for the manufacturers.

2 Held for Washing Windows on Sunday

Baltimore, Md., May 18 (A.P.).—Another thing you can't do on Sunday in Baltimore is to wash windows.

William Borden and Peter Buczkowski were arrested by a patrolman in the very act, he said, of applying water to a dirty pane at the new headquarters of a club. They posted $6.45 collateral for a hearing today.

All work on Sunday in Maryland is prohibited by a statute more than 200 years old. It was modified in 1920 to permit drug stores and gasoline stations to operate, and the recent Legislature gave Baltimore the right to vote on the question of Sunday labor, sales and amusements.

ARIZONA LOSES CASE TO ENJOIN HUGE DAM

Supreme Court Overrules State in Laying Claim to Water Rights.

(Associated Press.)

Arizona's long contest against the construction of Hoover dam yesterday met with a serious reverse in the Supreme Court.

The Nation's highest tribunal upheld the constitutionality of the law under which the gigantic project on the Colorado River is being built and refused to issue an injunction sought by the State to restrain the Interior Department from proceeding with the construction work.

At the same time, the court granted the State the right to come before it again if at some future time it can show its rights are being impaired by the building of the dam. In this event, the court said, Arizona's cause would be unprejudiced by yesterday's action.

Brandeis Delivers Opinion.

The State succeeded in showing that it may suffer injury from distribution of water to be impounded at the dam, the court said, but added it could not issue an injunction based upon the assumption that the State's rights would be adversely affected.

The opinion was delivered by Justice Brandeis. One member of the court, Justice McReynolds, dissented, and in a brief opinion held the court should have overruled the Government's motion to dismiss Arizona's complaint.

He took the view that the Federal Government and the States of the Colorado compact, against which the complaint was directed, should be required to answer Arizona's charges.

Work Will Go Forward.

Arizona's contest began when the project was first suggested. The State's two senators and one House member opposed it in Congress to the point of filibustering.

Work on the dam was begun several months ago. It will go forward uninterrupted as the result of yesterday's decision, although the court left a possibility that it may be halted if Arizona can sustain its complaint at some future time.

The State's complaint was based primarily upon the contention that she would suffer grave injury in the proposed distribution of water from a reservoir to be created by the dam. She asserted other States would receive water to which she was justly entitled.

PATRIOTIC LEADERS INDORSE PROJECT FOR DISTRICT FLAG

although every State in the Union is so provided, most of them with flags that have already achieved some measure of fame.

A letter from Louis G. Padgett, Washington attorney, thanking this paper "for the opportunity of participating in such a patriotic and significant contest as is being sponsored by The Washington Post," was typical of the others received.

"It is altogether fitting and proper that the District of Columbia should have a flag, and my sincere wishes are that your efforts will not have been in vain," wrote Mr. Padgett.

The contest announced in Sunday's Post has been indorsed by each of the District Commissioners, whose approval, in addition to a special act of Congress, would be necessary before any flag selected in the competition could be regarded as the District's official emblem.

The contest is open to every resident of the District. Designs should be submitted in pen and ink, on white paper, so that they can be reproduced in The Post. They should be addressed to the Flag Editor, care of The Washington Post. A prize of $25 will go to the winner, in addition to the distinction attached to designing a flag for the Capital.

What is the effect of modern Ultra Violet Rays upon tobacco? Dr. E. E. Free, one of America's well-known scientists, who was retained by us to study Lucky Strike's manufacturing process, addressing the Illuminating Engineering Society, said:

"The essential effect of the Ultra Violet is the production of better tobacco and of cigarettes regarded by virtually all smokers who have tested them as milder and with a lesser tendency to cause throat irritation."

Here in America LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette that employs Ultra Violet Rays in connection with its exclusive "TOASTING" Process—the only cigarette that brings you the benefits of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos.

NEW ROAD PRESSED BY PRINCE GEORGES

Lanham-Severn Highway Is Again Urged for Traffic at Bicentennial.

Activity in favor of the Lanham-Severn road continues among residents of Prince Georges County, although there seems to be no possibility of construction before the summer of 1932.

W. R. Gaither, of Cheverly, Md., plans to lay before G. Clinton Uhl, State road commissioner, correspondence with Col. U. S. Grant, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Mr. Gaither had asked extension of Maryland avenue, in the District, to take the increased flow of traffic expected on the proposed alternate route to Baltimore.

Col. Grant has replied, it is understood, that it would be impractical to extend the District street even though the new Maryland road should be completed in time for the George Washington Bicentennial in 1932. The extended road would have to run across the marsh lands along the Anacostia River, and difficulty is expected in foundation work.

Although the road association is stressing the advantage of having the road finished in time to take care of part of the bicentennial traffic, no county funds are expected to be available until early next year. The recent legislature failed to pass a bill authorizing a bond issue to construct the road.

It is expected that the extension of Maryland avenue and a possibility of connecting it with the new Baltimore road will be discussed at the next meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. If the Lanham-Severn road does become a reality, some new route into the center of town will be necessary, as Bladensburg road and Rhode Island avenue are pressed now to handle the Baltimore boulevard and Defense highway traffic.

Aside from the advantage of having more through routes in the county, Prince Georgians will have other benefits from the new road. Running from Lanham, on the Defense highway, to Severn, in Anne Arundel County on the General's highway, the road would open up all the territory between the Baltimore boulevard and the Defense highway, in the neighborhood of Bowie.

Fred W. Gast was elected first mayor of the newly incorporated town of Cheverly by a majority of 11 votes, receiving 60 to Bert H. Wise's 49 in the recent election. Councilmen who were elected are John N. Ogle, First Ward; William R. Gaither, Second; Reginald H. Wentworth, Third, and William A. Link, Fourth.

Mr. Ogle was elected without opposition, and Mr. Gaither won by a majority of 9 votes. The closest contest was in the Fourth Ward, where Mr. Link's majority was 2, although Mr. Wentworth was elected by only 3. Balloting was heavier than during the recent referendum, when the town accepted the charter authorized by the recent Legislature.

Residents of Colmar Manor expressed their approval of an $80,000 bond issue for streets by a vote of 178 to 31 in the referendum held last week. The issue was authorized by the legislature with a proviso that the voters should be allowed to approve it.

Pointing out how disarmament, unemployment and other national and international problems affected the welfare of every citizen and taxpayer, United States Senator Millard E. Tydings addressed the annual banquet of the Prince Georges County Firemen's Association at the University of Maryland.

Most of the other speakers praised the generous activities of volunteer firemen, citing Capt. B. Wesley Cranford, who was killed when the Marlboro truck overturned, as an example. A dispatching system for county apparatus, to avoid calling out more engines than necessary, was suggested by Delegate Charles C. Marbury, one of the speakers. The establishing of this system has been considered for some time, Toastmaster George Finger said.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer told the gathering that the proposal to increase the county appropriation for the fire companies was the only measure to mean increased taxes which was not protested against while the bills were pending in the legislature. He said this showed the general appreciation of the firemen's work.

Sergt. A. J. Bargagni, of the Washington department, suggested that the annual firemen's parade on Labor Day be enlarged to a national feature. Radio addresses by prominent speakers on methods of fire prevention could be worked in, he added.

Since the first of this year, the Prince Georges rescue squad has averaged 2½ runs per day, H. L. Leonard, president of the squad, told the diners. He gave credit for the success of the squad to the ladies' auxiliary and the various companies which have cooperated with the squad. The auxiliary hopes to become affiliated with the State association this year, according to Mrs. F. L. Stewart, vice president.

Others who spoke were Karl Young, president of the county association; Harry T. Wentz, president of the State Association; Dr. R. A. Pearson, of the University of Maryland; Augustus Emrich, chief engineer of the Baltimore department; J. H. Beattie, president of the Fairfax County Association, and G. Frank Allwine, president of the Arlington County group. Special guests introduced during the evening were T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission; Delegates William F. Keys and Oliver Metzerott, County Commissioners George N. Bowen and Walter M. Grimes, and H. C. Byrd, assistant to the president of Maryland University.

Prince Georges County schools have 85.3 per cent of the children between the ages of 7 and 16 enrolled in the public school system, having a standing of third in the State, according to the biennial census just tabulated. Montgomery County has the highest percentage, with 95.4 in the public schools, while Talbott County is second with 95.1 per cent.

Private and parochial schools in Prince Georges have an enrollment of 8.1 per cent of the school-age population, while 6.6 per cent are not enrolled in any school. Prince Georges has a public school list of 8,537 and a parochial and private school register of 812. The total public school enrollment is about 1,700 higher in Prince Georges than in Montgomery, although the latter has more than 150 more students in private schools.

The census shows that there were 228,716 children between the ages of 5 and 18 in the State during 1930, an increase of 3,278 over the number shown by the 1928 count. Of the total, 187,209 were white and 41,507 colored.

James E. Barry was arrested early yesterday morning and charged with sale and possession after Sheriff W. C. Hopkins and Frank Prince had raided a shed at Silver Hill and seized 20 half gallons of alleged liquor. Barry was taken before Judge Thomas D. Griffith, who committed him to the Marlboro Jail.

Sheriff Hopkins said that Barry had made a sale of a half-gallon just before the raid, taking marked money. The marked money, the sheriff said, was found on the man. Frank Prince, who assisted in the raid, is a former county policeman who was deputized for the occasion.

Charlottesville, Va., May 18.—Hundreds of persons from many States who have contributed to the work in the mountain mission fields of the Episcopal Church will go tomorrow to Mission Home, in the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains, 25 miles northwest of this city, to attend the ceremonies incident to the laying of the corner stone of St. Anne's Preventorium.

The building, being erected at a cost of $25,000, takes the place of the one destroyed by fire on December 2 last.

The new preventorium, erected on a knoll, is built of native rock and is fireproof throughout. It will house indigent children from the immediate section, boys and girls. Large sleeping porches have been provided for the patients.

The corner stone laying ceremony will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning, and will be attended by many delegates to the 136th annual Council of the Diocese of Virginia, which meets Tuesday night in St. Paul's Memorial Church at the University of Virginia, and continues through Thursday.

THE ARMY OF THE AIR.

American air forces are having their first Nation-wide concentration for general maneuvers, inventory and practical tests in large formations. The initial review at Dayton saw more than 500 planes take off from Fairfield and Wright fields. Intricate maneuvers were executed in formation for mimic warfare, and the planes returned to base with a minimum of minor casualties.

This demonstration that tactical theories can be quickly executed in actual aerial defense formations is no slight triumph for the efficiency of the Air Corps organization. The primary objective of these tests is to determine the value of present equipment and real needs for aerial defense of the Eastern seaboard. Problems can be worked out on a practical basis. These include not only the achievement of teamwork among heretofore unrelated units, organization into units of the attack, pursuit, observation and bombardment planes and methods of command, but the manifold questions relating to ground areas required, equipment and supplies necessary for efficient action.

The comparative usefulness of radio and other means of communication, the length of time required to take off and land when large numbers of planes are employed, the size of staffs needed to service them, the amount and distribution of spare parts and the adequacy of supply and logistic schedules, will all come in for practical test that has never before been possible.

Plans for this greatest of Army air meets involve a total of 672 planes. Only 300 are classified as combat planes that would actually be available to resist an attacking force, and one-third of even these are obsolete. Since it is estimated that four planes in defense are needed to resist one attacking plane, the Army force appears woefully inadequate. One modern airplane carrier could bring more than 50 planes offshore.

Needs and deficiencies of the Air Corps will be brought home to Eastern cities in forcible manner before the present program is completed. From Dayton the great formations will go to Chicago and thence will proceed for extensive demonstrations about New York. Following in turn, the air armada will visit Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. It will be May 30 before the Capital sees the heavens darkened and hears the artificial thunder of its protecting war birds.

JAMES MONROE.

The unveiling of a bust of James Monroe in the Hall of Fame in New York is a timely reminder of the part which his doctrine of America for Americans has played in the development of the Western Hemisphere. The Monroe Doctrine has placed James Monroe's name among those of America's immortals.

Both President Hoover and Elihu Root took advantage of this occasion to reaffirm their faith in the Monroe Doctrine. President Hoover referred to it as the foundation upon which has developed the existing mutual respect and good will between the United States and the other American republics. The President has been accused of weakening the Monroe Doctrine by his recent policy in Nicaragua. But by respecting the sovereignty of that Latin-American republic, without relinquishing protection for American citizens, he followed the spirit as well as the letter of the Monroe Doctrine.

Mr. Root pointed out that the Monroe Doctrine does not assert any right or claim of right by the United States to intermeddle or interfere with the independence of other American states. Its challenge is to Europe and not to Latin America. The very purpose of the policy adopted by President Monroe was to prevent encroachments by European powers. For that same purpose the United States adheres to the doctrine today.

In effect the doctrine assures the independence of the American nations. When this Government uses its influence to save one of the weaker Central American republics from anarchy it does so to protect that country from foreign intervention as well as to protect the rights of American citizens. If Europe is not to be allowed to encroach upon the Western Hemisphere, the United States must prevent situations which might justify such encroachment.

James Monroe will occupy a still more important place in American history as time goes on. Under the policy which he formulated two continents have developed into a great family of peaceful as well as peace-loving nations. What might have been the result if European powers had been allowed to extend their dominions in this hemisphere no one knows. But it is safe to conclude that the Americas would be torn to some degree by the same animosities and racial hatreds that make Europe the world's battlefield. The inauguration of a policy that has allowed each Western republic to develop according to the inclinations of its own people without fear of conquest from Europe, and with a minimum of internal disturbances, is one of the greatest pieces of statesmanship in all history. When Latin America can look at the policy from the proper perspective its merits will be better appreciated throughout the two Americas.

THE WHEAT CONFERENCE.

Even as the world wheat conference in London opens it is under ominous forebodings of failure. Eleven different nations which have acute wheat problems will make an attempt to agree upon some plan to dispose of the present huge surplus and to hold future exports in check. But the problem is so complicated, the interests of the participating countries are so varied, and the wheat-producing capacity of the world is so far in excess of the demand that little hope can be entertained for an effective solution.

The United States is vitally interested in the conference because of the huge wheat surplus held by the Federal Farm Board and because of the large crop that is certain to be produced on American farms this year. Unless this wheat can be disposed of on foreign markets farmers as well as the Government will suffer heavy losses.

Economists generally agree that the best solution for the wheat problem in this country is for American farmers to quit selling abroad. If they produce only for the domestic market, prices will be protected by the tariff. But the wheat crop is still far in excess of the domestic demand. Farmers refuse to heed the Farm Board's plea for reduction of acreage, and no satisfactory plan for curtailment has been worked out. It appears that American wheat will be forced on the world market in spite of the Farm Board, at least for some years.

Argentina, Canada, Australia and the nations of southeastern Europe might be willing to curtail their exports for the sake of higher prices. But Soviet Russia is constantly expanding acreage, and there is no hope of its cooperation in a curtailment plan. The Soviet is determined to flood the world with cheap wheat. If other wheat-producing countries intend to protect their own farmers more drastic measures than round-table conferences will be necessary. The Soviet five-year plan hangs like the sword of Damocles over the conference from the very beginning.

DIFFERING IDEALS.

Sensible and practical sentiments were expressed at the welcoming reception in New York by the new Minister to the United States from Panama, Dr. Harmodio Arias. Dr. Arias is a man of action as well as a shrewd observer and frank exponent of racial differences and ideals. He was the leader of the recent revolutionary movement in Panama and was acting president until the installation of Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former minister in Washington, whom he now succeeds here.

Speaking before the Pan-American Society, Dr. Arias said that it had often been thought "that the best way to bring about closer understanding between the countries of the North and South was to proclaim in high-sounding words that the peoples of both regions have the same aspirations, ideals and sentiments, and that the same conditions exist here and there, and therefore they should work together for the same ends."

The minister was candid in expressing the opinion that while there are ideals and aspirations in common, there are profound differences that need study; differences of race, customs and tradition that make it unsound to attempt to apply general formulas. Such an undiscriminating policy, Dr. Arias found, tended to create among the people of Latin America a feeling of distrust and gave anti-Americans a chance to sow seeds of suspicion, by asserting that Pan-Americanism was a figment of the imagination and a cloak for United States imperialism.

Dr. Arias finds a new spirit of self-analysis pervading Latin-American activities and culture, and that those nations are developing a greater interest in the ideals and aspirations of other nations. This certainly expresses equally well a changing attitude in the United States, which has come about gradually with closer relations and better understanding commercially, officially and socially. It is a transition that means respect for the ideals and aspirations of other nations without desire to bring about a monotonous pattern of uniformity; appreciation of the fact that trade relations can not be maintained on any basis of sentimentality, and agreement that the welfare and happiness of nations require that each shall develop its own destiny.

SOVIET SLAVERY EXPOSED.

The London Times is furnishing the world with what is perhaps the first comprehensive picture of labor conditions in Soviet Russia's timber industry. Representatives of the Times have made a detailed investigation of both Soviet statutes governing employment and actual practices in the timber camps. These findings are of unusual interest in the United States because of the embargo which the Treasury raised against lumber produced by Soviet convict labor.

Five different types of labor are used in the Soviet lumbering industry. They are listed in the Times' survey as follows: Labor by local peasants, indentured labor raised in the countryside, statute labor, the labor of imprisoned convicts and of unimprisoned convicts.

It is amusing to note what Soviet officials consider voluntary labor or "self-imposed" tasks. The Soviet timber council plans work for each village and the plans are submitted to general meetings of the inhabitants for confirmation. One-fourth of the total number of voters constitutes a quorum for such gatherings, and unless more than one-half of those present protest the work is considered "a self-imposed obligation." Priests, kulaks and other "class enemies" are not allowed to vote. Any one else bold enough to vote against projects sponsored by the central dictatorship may be suspected of counter-revolutionary sympathies.

An undertaking accepted by one-eighth of the eligible voters becomes obligatory on all able-bodied individuals in the community. Any one who fails to perform his share of the work is fined up to five times the value of such work and all his possessions may be sold at auction. If groups of peasants resist their goods are confiscated, they are imprisoned for two years at hard labor, and they may be banished from their homes. Such is voluntary labor in the timber districts of Soviet Russia.

The five-year plan calls for the importation of 5,000,000 indentured laborers into the timber regions in 1931. Women are being mobilized for work on the collective farms, so that the men may be sent to lumbering camps. Uncollectivized peasants are drafted for timber work by the commissariat of labor. They have nothing to do with their contract for services and must go where they are sent. In addition the council for labor and defense frequently orders "compulsory labor service" on a large scale, which applies to all Russians who are available. The Soviet agency of terrorism, the Ogpu, is called into action to help enforce these orders. The names of deserters are published and the Soviet monopoly is instructed to issue them no provisions.

The Soviet labor code provides that wage earners shall not be transferred from one job to another or removed from one locality to another without their consent. But this part of the code is merely a display card. It is intended to deceive foreign nations as to the dreadful conditions under which Russian peasants are forced to live so that the dictatorship may dump vast quantities of exports on the markets of the world. The investigators for the Times concluded that this section of the code has ceased to have any practical application on the Soviet frontiers. Russia's enslavement by an avaricious dictatorship can no longer be denied.

Charlie Chaplin says the British are "the greatest hypocrites in the world," but John Bull will doubtless reply that it's something to be foremost in that prevalent modern art.

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS:

Northampton, Mass., May 18.—If continental Europe can work out some plan for economic unity it will be of much profit to the world. The difficulties are great. The main approach to economic unity has been through political unity. That was what made the United States. The political cooperation exercised through the League of Nations has been helpful, but it has been far from abolishing age-old race and national antagonisms.

The rivalries that exist among different sections of our country would certainly result in independent antagonistic action if they were not restrained by a strong central government. Perhaps European states can conquer a more impetuous tendency. If it is done, there will be a large enough population with a common interest to furnish better support for mass production. The present inability of the continental countries to market such production is their peculiar weakness. A tariff fails to help them in the way it helps us. A strong and prosperous Europe, so peaceful in response to mutual interests that it can raise the living standards of its people, should be welcome everywhere. Our interests in Europe are so great that, as long as our own standards are protected, the better off she is the better off we shall be.

THE COLONIAL EXPOSITION

From the New York Herald Tribune.

There are few Americans who would not learn some new and important things about their country's place in the world by attending the International Colonial Exposition which has just opened in Paris. Paradoxical as it may seem, most Americans are probably far more familiar with the colonial problems and possibilities of other nations than they are with their own. If the intellectual energy expended in this country on Gandhi, for instance, could be transferred to the Philippines, a government would arise in Manila of which Americans could be proud.

At the Paris exposition is an American section, which, judging by the accounts, gives the visitor a splendid and inspiring bird's-eye view of this country. The great spiritual impulse of America is fittingly exemplified in a model of the Washington home at Mount Vernon. Nothing else by an architect's hand can so quicken the pulse of a true American. In neighboring buildings are exhibits setting forth aspects of the Philippines, Guam, Samoa, Porto Rico and other outlying possessions. A model of the Panama Canal, that superb example of our material accomplishment, is also on view. One is impelled to ask why such an exhibition of our colonial empire should not be permanently on view in New York. It would surely pay rich dividends in public interest and the growth of a much needed feeling of responsibility toward our overseas territory.

Like the French exposition, it might promote the knowledge of the immense value of colonies to a nation, like France or the United States, which has no tropics of its own. As the French colonial minister said at the opening, the exposition is convincing proof that France is not losing her grip. He might have gone even further: the French colonial empire, which has had such an astounding growth, is a powerful guaranty that France will remain a first-class power. Intelligent development has already made certain portions of the empire rich beyond expectation. Trouble and interest are not being spared on the others. Clearly the French, who had so many colonial reverses when the British empire was building, have developed Admiral Mahan's sixth element of sea power—intelligent governmental direction.

Those who know France and have felt the subtle magic of Paris in May will envy the visitors to this exposition. In a few minutes the visitor can subject himself to atmospheres each more exotic than the other. The great sinister towers of Angkor Wat in Cambodia, the thatched huts of primitive Africans and the tropic architecture of Algeria would, in any place, make a fascinating spectacle. In the dexterous hands of the French their impressiveness must be increased. Exposition is an art at which the French need acknowledge no masters. If you add the air of France to the Frenchman's art you have created something which those who see it can never forget.

WHY SOME JURORS HANG OUT.

Eleven to one they stood. An hour or more
Within the jury room they'd argued o'er
A fellow's guilt. Eleven were agreed
That he, the poor defendant, should be freed,
But one stood out, and still the clock moved on,
And still the jury stood eleven to one.
"One must have courage, conscience to appease,
Who sits in judgment has himself to please,
And who against all arguments and plea
Stands firm and fast by us must honored be."
A juror said, "Come, let us vote once more!"
But still the ballot ended as before.
"Give us your reasons," said a juror gray,
"Why stubbornly you vote the self-same way
And hold us here? This is a trivial case,
Surely this simple question we can face
And reach agreement. Why drag on?"
But still the ballot stood eleven to one.
Then spake the stubborn juror: "Now it's noon,
Lunch will be served to jurors very soon.
I'll gladly vote to set the poor man free,
But let us still pretend to disagree.
If here we stay until the dinner call,
The city will buy victuals for us all."

There Are No Bronze Statues of Men Who Said: "But on the Other Hand."

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THERE is a growing tendency, on the part of self-styled intellectuals, to frown upon any bold statement of belief or fact.

Any declaration of truth or faith that is made without apology is called dogmatism, and the practice of speaking plainly is considered uncouth and vulgar.

"Let us discuss the matter without heat," say the intellectuals, "and consider it calmly pro and con. To commit ourselves to anything without reservation would be dogmatic and narrow."

Their fault is that in trying to avoid one absurdity they devote themselves to a greater one.

The dogmatism of the ignorant—the know-it-all cock-sureness of the uninformed—is indeed a folly to be avoided. But it does not follow that the man who knows the way should keep silent in order to set the foolish guide an example.

The world has need of plain speaking. It wanders restlessly in a fog of doubt and uncertainty for want of leaders who will declare the truth.

Men who might be leaders are content to amuse and entertain because they lack both courage and conviction.

They think they are being judicious when they are being yellow.

In trying to avoid dogmatism they evade principle.

Why do they speak at all if they have nothing to say?

Never yet has any man led the world to new heights or effected a needed reform by means of wishy-washy, pro-and-con discussion.

Jesus spoke as one having authority and men listened in wonder. Preachers kept a following so long as they profited by His example.

The leaders of men in all times and places have been courageous souls who dared to face the world and cry, "Come unto me and hear the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The man worth hearing is the man who has within him a conviction as big as a mule and dares to shout it from the housetops.

This Nation was built by men who had convictions—not by timid souls afraid of being wrong.

Often they were wrong, but by daring to declare the faith that was in them they made others think, and the conflict of ideas developed leaders who saw the truth.

Intellectual neutrality means stagnation and decay. It is the last resort of the spineless.

The curse of our times is cautious leadership that dare not stand four-square to the world and speak the truth despite the hosts of hell and high water.

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

Prohibition and Politics.
(Christian Science Monitor.)

Three United States senators, representing the two major parties and the Progressives, who as yet are uncertain whether they will figure in the next presidential election as a party, have given to the country their views as to what are likely to be the issues in 1932. Naturally, each sets out for his own party an array of promises for the betterment of social and political conditions which would be highly impressive were it not that the other two offer equally glittering assurances of reforms to be effected should they be given office.

There is not much profit to be derived from studying these forecasts as a whole, first, because they are counsels of perfection to which the parties are most unlikely to live up, and, secondly, because each program is liable to be rudely mutilated when the cold-blooded committee on resolutions sits on the eve of the campaign to formulate the issues upon which its political party may most hopefully invite support.

But what is interesting and suggestive is the fact that no one of these three spokesmen incorporated in his forecast of a party platform any reference whatsoever to the prohibition law. So slight appears to have been the influence of Mr. Raskob with his party that Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, speaking for the Democracy, ignored the issue of repeal of the prohibition law for which Raskob so firmly stands.

Bogus Protectionists.
New York Times.

In 1928 the Democrats pussyfooted on the tariff. During the presidential campaign they sought to create the impression that they were not going to do much if anything about it. They talked like good protectionists, as they had in the platform, which used the Republican hieratic language about "the maintenance of legitimate business and a high standard of wages for American labor" and "actual difference between the costs of production at home and abroad." It even made the millennial promise of "equitable distribution of the benefits and burdens of the tariff among all."

The scene is shifted, almost with a jerk. The Democrats were all for "taking the tarriff out of politics." Now, so far as they are represented by the propagandists at Washington, they are all for making it a main issue in politics. So swiftly does the hand of political wisdom grasp the forelock of opportunity or opportunism. It wouldn't do to be as swift of forecast. The farmers aren't going to part with their hunk of protection, however little good it does them. Ordinarily, fear of the great industrial States where the doctrine of jug-handled trade prevailed so long, would temper the seldom excessive Democratic zeal for tariff reform.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Farmers Must Learn to Depend Upon Income From Crops and Not Rising Land Values for Profits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fall of farm real estate values in some States to a post-war mark is fraught with meaning for all industry. This shrinkage in value; this adjustment of capitalization to earning power, is directing attention to the actual cause of this worldwide business depression.

Pioneer farmers were satisfied with small profits, because they anticipated a large return from the increase in land values. Surplus earnings were invested in more land. As a result the farm plant is overextended.

Times have changed. The capital structure of the industry has increased. The business of farming can no longer be kept active by the spending of profits made through rising land values. The farm living today must come from the annual earnings of land, and not from the natural increase in its value.

Farmers of the United States are faced with the task of changing over from extensive to intensive farming; from a profit economy to an income economy. Profits were the measure of buying power in the one case, income will be the new index.

Business will no longer be forced to depend for its activity upon an increase in capital values. The elimination of this speculative influence will make the stabilization of income a possibility. It will enable industry to adjust its rate of expansion to a flow rather than to a peak. Capital and labor will be able to meet the cost of upkeep in advance of expansion.

But agriculture is not alone concerned in this change. The problem of stabilizing the flow of income so as to insure year-round purchasing power is common to all industry. Capital and labor are jointly responsible for bringing the rate of industrial expansion into balance with the growth of income.

It is balance here that must be maintained if we are to avoid the evils of overproduction and unemployment. If we are to make possible full time employment of capital and labor, if we are to realize higher standards of living permanently financed out of income. SCOVILLE HAMLIN.

Emolas Ventures a Panacea for the Silver Enigma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I believe J. F. Darling, director of the British Midland Bank and noted authority on economics and banking, has hit upon the right scheme to stabilize silver with his superbank idea.

Then if some of the aristocrats who throw the mortar to put up 20-story apartment and office buildings would use a little more silver in the shape of half dollars, quarters and dimes, if some of the plebeians who infest the night clubs and sport tracks would consent to carry a few extra ounces of silver change in their pockets, and if the high-brow financiers who know it all would let up shoving the gold standard onto a billion or more people in Abyssinia, Argentina, Equador, Mexico, Central America, China and India, where some of the denizens have been accustomed to silver for thousands of years, perhaps an improvement in trade might set in and our export trade might not entirely disappear. Protest Is Registered Against Conversion of Beauty Spots Into Parking Lots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad to note at least one protest against turning the Mall or any other of Washington's remaining beauty spots into parking spaces and filling stations.

Sometime even motor-mad Americans will see the grotesque wastefulness of using a five-passenger car to transport one or two human atoms for one or two hours out of twenty-four and will manage to achieve some sort of adequate and satisfactory public service.

So long as our streets and open spaces are used not for necessary traffic but as storage spaces for dead or empty automobiles, which can be manufactured quicker than trees can be slaughtered to accommodate them, not all the experts in the world are going to be able to solve the "traffic problem." THERESA RUSSELL.

Writer Notes That Dead Trees Mar Washington's Beauty in Some Spots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in the Sunday edition of The Post, May 17, is very pleasing to the careless reader. Unhappily I have a trait or disposition to check up on any statement or assertion made by any one, no matter who. So when I read your beautifully worded editorial this morning, I stepped out onto my front porch to get an "eyeful" of those "double row of oaks along Pennsylvania avenue southeast." I live at 1340 on that street.

My! oh my! What a shock! Between Fourteenth street and Twelfth street there are fifty-eight gigantic white oak trees bordering the street car tracks which divide the avenue into two beautiful highways. For over fifty years, those oaks have been a blessing to humanity and have been pointed to with pride by editorial writers, city builders and real estate agents. This year when it was time for the sap to come up, and cause the trees to bloom forth with all their majestic beauty, there was not enough vitality in twenty-eight of the fifty-eight to draw up the life giving sap, and now their naked limbs stretch forth in mute accusation of dire and willful neglect on the part of those who are paid by the Government to properly care for and attend to these noble specimens of the king of trees.

COURT UPHOLDS BAN ON OIL PROSPECTING

Hoover Declaration in 1929 Leads to Decision on Wilbur's Policy.

(Associated Press.)

A few words to newspapermen by President Hoover in March, 1929, led to a decision yesterday by the Supreme Court that Secretary Wilbur's policy of refusing permits to prospect for oil and gas on public lands is valid.

At the press conference the President announced his oil conservation policy. A few days later Secretary Wilbur said that, carrying out the policy, he would issue no more prospecting permits.

Ethel M. McClennan, who sought a permit through the land office at Sacramento, Calif.; Roy G. Barton, who wanted to search for oil in New Mexico, and several others brought suit to compel the Interior Secretary to issue them permits.

They were successful in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, but lost in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, Utah and New Mexico joined in an attack upon the order when the case was appealed to the Supreme Court. They said it deprived them of revenue which might result if the search were permitted.

The claim was made that under the law the Secretary did not have the power to withdraw the lands as he did, but Justice McReynolds, who delivered the opinion, said, "Having examined the act we can not say that by any clear and indisputable language it refutes his position."

He said the cases hinged upon the authority conferred upon the Interior Secretary, adding, "Congress apparently held in mind the distinction between a positive mandate to the Secretary and permission to take certain action in his discretion."

"It is unnecessary now to declare the precise meaning of the relevant provisions of the act," Justice McReynolds said. "It was passed when, according to a widely accepted view, decline of petroleum production in the United States was imminent. In fact, there has been an enormous increase and a consequent troublesome surplus."

London, May 18 (A.P.).—The railroad station at Reading today was the prosaic setting of the reunion of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford after four and one half months of separation.

Mary, who arrived at Southhampton today from New York, had been consulting time tables and had discovered that any train from the west country would stop at Reading, so she had motored there. In a London hotel tonight Doug and Mary said they would probably stay in London for two weeks and then go to Holland and Norway.

Work Is Resumed On U. S. Building

Washington Labor Will Be Used on Agricultural Extensible Unit.

Construction work on the Department of Agriculture "extensible building" was resumed today after an interruption of two months. Washington labor is to be used exclusively on the job, according to R. H. Hunter, of the Starrett Bros. & Eaken Co., Inc., of New York City.

Work on the buildings was stopped on March 18 when the contractor, Nelson-Pedley Co., of Philadelphia, went into the hands of receivers. The Starrett Bros. & Cohen Co. was named as contractor by the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co., of New York, sureties for the Philadelphia concern and therefore responsible for completion of the buildings.

The Starrett Bros. Co. has brought to Washington the same staff which engineered the construction of the Empire State Building in New York City. The original contract called for completion of the buildings within 450 calendar days from June 2, 1930, and construction work will be speeded up in an endeavor to finish the job within the specified time, according to Mr. Hunter.

REVOLUTION STARTS IN SOUTHERN CHINA

Cantonese Oppose Chiang, Former Leader; 200 Die as Fighting Begins.

Shanghai, May 18 (A.P.).—Fighting has begun in the smoldering ruins of south China against the Central government at Nanking. With 200 Nationalist soldiers dead in clashes with insurrectionists in the past few days, both sides mobilized their forces today for the expected civil war.

Kwangtung and Kwangsi provincial leaders were reported about to set up a provisional government in Canton, opposed to the "dictatorship" of Chiang Kai-Shek, chairman of the Nationalist government.

Thus Gen. Chiang, who four years ago led the Cantonese armies in victories over provincial war lords to erect the Nationalist government, must fight the Cantonese who placed him in power.

Aligned against him is said to be Sun Fo, minister of railways in his government, reported in hiding in Shanghai and about to go to Canton to campaign against Chiang.

Sun Fo, son of the late Sun Yat-Sen, father of the Chinese republic, is reported to be seeking the downfall of Chiang, close friend and follower of his father.

As the antigovernment armies assembled in Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces, Chiang mobilized his Nationalist troops in the bordering provinces of Hunan and Kiangsi. He also seized 25 steamers to carry troops against Canton in an attack from the sea.

Building Outlook Brighter.

Chicago, May 18 (A.P.).—President A. E. Dickinson, of the Indiana Limestone Co., announced today that new construction in the United States during the first four months of 1931 has totaled more than one and a third billion dollars. He said that although construction volume so far was about $500,000,000 below the same period last year, if Government building got under way as expected, the year's total should at least equal 1930.

British Royalty to Receive Ten U. S. Debutantes Today

First of Season's Four "Courts" Anxiously Awaited by Girls and Wife of American Minister to Denmark; Rehearsals Are Held.

London, May 18 (A.P.).—Ten American debutantes and one woman wise in the ways of royal courts waited with mixed feelings tonight for their presentation to King George and Queen Mary tomorrow at Buckingham Palace in the first of the season's four "courts."

In hotel suites throughout the city nervous girls tried on court gowns for the hundredth time and repeated over and over again the sequence of the things they must do during the presentation ceremony.

For the rehearsals, flustered fathers and mothers, almost as nervous as their daughters, posed as the king and queen, while the difficult court curtsy was given, first to one and then to the other.

Probably the only one of the group of Americans to feel calm on eve of the great social event was Mrs. Ralph H. Booth, wife of the American Minister to Denmark, who is accustomed to the pomp and ceremonies of court functions.

The recent marriage of her daughter was the chief social function of the Copenhagen season, and she is quite at home in the midst of royalty.

The second court at Buckingham Palace will be held the day after tomorrow and nine Americans will be presented then, six debutantes and three matrons.

A short time ago it seemed probable King George's illness might prevent him from appearing at the first court, in which case his place would have been taken by the Prince of Wales, but his recovery has been so complete there now is no doubt that he will take his place beside the queen and smile kindly on the curtsying ladies.

Another Record Crop Of Sugar Is Reported

(Associated Press)

The world produced its largest cane and beet sugar crop—31,506,000 short tons—in the 1930-31 season. The Agricultural Department said yesterday this figure exceeds the record crop of 1928-1929 by 835,000 tons. The increase was attributed largely to sharp increases in beet sugar production.

The Department said the Chadbourne plan to limit exports from important sugar producing countries was the outstanding feature of the world sugar situation, which has been complicated by heavy surplus stocks and low prices. The United States is not a party to this plan.

Permit Delay Is Asked On Far West Project

(Associated Press.)

Reclamation Commissioner Mead has asked the Power Commission to withhold any permit for developing Kettle Falls on the Columbia River until Army engineers have completed their present survey of the Columbia Basin.

Mr. Mead explained that he wished to prevent a comparatively small power construction such as that sought by the Washington Water Power Co. from interfering with possibly a much larger reclamation and power scheme. He pointed out that a similar situation had existed in regard to Hoover Dam in the Boulder Canyon project.

ORDINARY WEAVE

GRENINE WEAVE

Slow-reeled silk minimizes rings and shadows, because these defects are caused by unevenness in the raw silk thread, made up of four cocoon filaments. Due to the speed at which the regular silk is reeled it is impossible to keep the thread uniform. In slow-reeled silk, the reels are run only one-fourth as fast and are automatically controlled, so when a cocoon filament runs out or breaks, the worker adds another to keep the four filaments even in the combined thread. The careful and slow reeling naturally makes a more even thread—eliminating rings as far as is possible.

In addition to this, Jane Wandl "Grenine" (48-gauge, 3-thread hose) is made to unusually high specifications on the most modern machines in a modern washed-air plant and under the most rigid inspection (an average of 32 pairs out of every 100 rejected by the inspectors).

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Capital Youth Back Speaking China's Tongue

Paul M. Linebarger, Jr., Here on Vacation From Peiping School.

WHEN "seventeen" sets out on the broad highway with the mysteries of China at his doorstep and Korea just around the corner to offer adventure there generally is attained something worth while. And when "seventeen" is master of several languages, including Chinese, things become interesting. Returned from China on Saturday Mr. Paul Myron Linebarger, jr., is at the home of his parents on R street ready, perhaps, to settle down for a short vacation after a prolonged period of study at the Language School in Peiping interspersed with travel in the Orient.

Making the return trip by way of Mongolia and Korea, Mr. Linebarger spent a little time in further research and observation in the Far East, a habit begun at the age of 14 when he entered George Washington University and forthwith took an interest in research work as well as literature. And with several years residence in China to his credit the young student has attained the goal of contributing editor to the Chinese National, a magazine of world-wide circulation which is published at Shanghai.

Fortunate to have spent a part of his childhood in the Far East young Linebarger made the most of his parents' residence in China, where Mr. Linebarger, sr., is serving as legal adviser to that government. His son elected to remain in the Orient for study last November when Mr. Linebarger left China to join Mrs. Linebarger here for the winter. Mr. Linebarger will leave next week for Europe en route to his post at Nanking, where he maintains headquarters.

During his absence, Mrs. Linebarger and their son will linger in Washington, with plans unformed for the summer, although the latter may enter upon summer courses at the university. The young man's success in the realm of writing has been of marked character, one of his recent articles in the Chinese National having met with flattering recognition from older and more experienced journalists. It deals with a review of recent books and expositions on Chinese life as offered by modern writers of various countries whose views, young Linebarger things, are often misrepresentative of the country beyond the Pacific.

While in China with his parents the young man followed out his desire to study at first hand the outlook of young Chinese on political matters, so he made his home at the Young Men's Christian Association, where he also perfected his knowledge of the language. Acting also as secretary of his father, young Linebarger got a good slant on foreign political affairs and had many interesting articles published.

Although Mr. Linebarger, sr., will remain in China next winter, it is doubtful whether he will be joined there by his wife until later.

Ambassador Martino To Return on June 1.

The Italian Ambassador, Nobile Giacomo de Martino, who went to Europe several weeks ago with Donna Antonietta, will sail for this country on Friday, arriving here about June 1. Donna Antonietta, who has not been in good health, will pass the summer at her home in Italy. The ambassador will be here during the coming season.

The Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik will entertain a small company at tea on Friday afternoon at the legation.

Senator Claude A. Swanson will sail on May 27 aboard the Leviathan for Europe. He will go to Paris, where he will join Mrs. Swanson, who sailed several weeks ago. Mrs. Swanson is one of the assistant hostesses at the International Colonial and Overseas Exposition.

Returns to New York City

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. RUFUS PECKHAM and her young son, Rufus, jr. Mrs. Peckham, with her husband, returned to her home in New York Sunday night after visiting Mr. and Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios. Mrs. Peckham was formerly Miss Virginia Selden, of Washington.

Capital Folk Busy Planning For Summer

Meantime Small Parties Are Being Given in Country Resorts.

With the spring season practically over, Capital hostesses are busy making plans for the summer months. Mrs. Thomas A. Stone, wife of the second secretary of the Canadian legation, will go to Sorrento, Me., where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ewing, of New York, have a home. She plans to leave the Capital about July 1 and Mr. Stone will join her there later in the season. It was in Sorrento that her marriage to Mr. Stone took place last summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Stone, who entertain small parties frequently at their attractive Georgetown home, will give a buffet luncheon on Memorial Day. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing came from New York over the week-end to see their son-in-law and daughter. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes.

While here the Ewings were entertained at several small fetes and were hosts themselves at dinner Saturday night at Normandy Farm, when they had among their guests Bishop James E. Freeman. Miss Tracy Copp entertained there at breakfast on Sunday. Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall was hostess at luncheon and bridge Saturday, and Mr. Waverley Taylor was host at luncheon Saturday, when he had as guests Senator and Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette.

Rear Admiral Orin G. Murfin and Mrs. Murfin are spending some time at the Hotel Martinique.

Mrs. Walter D. Wilcox is in New York and will sail on June 6 for Europe to spend the summer in France, as is her custom.

Dinner Dance Is Arranged by Country Club

Cherry Tree Planting Is Participated in by Mrs. W. H. Taft.

The National Woman's Country Club announces a second dinner dance to be held under the auspices of the club for members and their invited guests on Friday evening, May 29, at the clubhouse. Dinner will be served at 8:15, to be followed by dancing until 1 a. m.

Mrs. William Howard Taft, Mme. Debuchi, Mrs. M De Clare Berry and Judge John Barton Payne participated in the cherry-tree planting last Thursday afternoon when, with appropriate ceremony, four cherry trees were set into the terrace in front of the clubhouse. Mrs. Berry dedicated her tree to Senora de Padilla, and Judge Payne named his for the State of Virginia.

Dance Planned Here for Fliers In Maneuvers

Dinners Also Arranged for Aviation Week of Army Corps.

The last week of May will be a gay one in Washington for everybody interested in aviation, and for the many young girls, who will entertain the several hundred aviators who will be here at that time.

On May 23, New York City will be "ceilinged" with airplanes flying in formation over the city at 100 miles an hour. It will take the armada 20 minutes to fly over a given point.

After the maneuvers in New York the host of planes will fly over Washington in the same way and many of the fliers will stop in Washington for a brief visit; while here they will be extensively entertained and on the evening of May 30 there will be a large dance given in their honor at one of the local country clubs.

Many dinners will precede the dance, among them being that of Mr. and Mrs. Burdette Wright at their home in Georgetown. Mr. Wright was formerly in the United States Air Corps, where he made a brilliant record during the war. Another interesting dinner will be that given on the same night by Maj. and Mrs. Willis Hale. Maj. Hale is at present in the Army Air Corps.

Pretty girls in colorful costumes contributed to the pictorial effect of the garden-party given yesterday afternoon at the Convent of Perpetual Adoration, for the benefit of the poor churches. Gay booths presided over by wives of the members of the Diplomatic Corps offered attractive wares, and guests gathered about the tea table presided over by Mme. Claudel, wife of the French Ambassador, and her daughter, Mlle. Claudel. Also assisting were Senora de Calderon, Countess Roncalli, Countess Gropello, Countess Cornelia Szechenyi, in her native costume of Hungary—her full white embroidered skirt topped by a sleeveless basque.

Senorita Maris de Diez de Medina was striking in a white shawl, embroidered in large red flowers and a red rose tucked in her hair, and Mlle. Reine Claudel wore a Czechoslovakian costume.

Mme. Debuchi, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, was in charge of the Japanese booth, assisted by her young daughter, charming in a kimona of soft blues and mauve. With her was Miss Mary Louise Johnson, also in costume. Mme. Kato, wife of the counselor of the embassy, also assisted.

The fete will be held this afternoon from 4 until 7 o'clock.

Miss Bertha Chinn sailed the last of the week for France and will spend about six weeks there and in England.

Mr. Gardner Cowles, jr., of Des Moines, Iowa, is at the Willard for a few days. Mr. Cowles is the managing editor of the Des Moines Register Tribune.

Mrs. Charles E. White, wife of Maj. White, U. S. A., will also entertain at luncheon today at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Duncan Cameron, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Elsie Quinby, will sail for this country tomorrow from Europe, where she has spent several months. Mrs. Cameron and Miss Quinby will come to Washington for a short time before going to Newport to open their cottage for the summer months.

Will Sail for Italy

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. PERRY S HEATH, who, with her brother, Mr. Edwin B. Conway, will sail Friday on the Conte Grande for Naples, and after several weeks in Italy will go to Switzerland and France to spend the summer.

Tennis Team Of Argentina Gives Surprise

Social Washington, Agog Over Early Arrivals, Plans Parties.

Springing a surprise on the reception committee, and in fact on every one who is connected officially with the forthcoming Davis Cup matches at Chevy Chase Club, members of the Argentine team arrived unexpectedly in Washington yesterday afternoon. The team was not due here until next week, when members of the American team will arrive from Canada.

Consequently the committee is in a state, trying to formulate an impromptu program for the entertainmen of the visitors, who will reside at Chevy Chase Club during their sojourn here. Several dinners are being arranged, although dates have not as yet been chosen. Tomorrow morning they will call at the Argentine Embassy to pay their respects to their countryman, the Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Malbran.

The Argentinians were met by the director general of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe; Commander T. C. Gill and Mr. Griffith Warfield, members of the reception committee. The team includes Mr. Edwin French, captain; Mr. William Robson, Mr. Richard Sissener and Mr. Ronald Boyd. Bearing English names, these men number among their ancestors the first English colonists in Argentina. Others on the team are Mr. Lucilo del Castillo and Mr. Adriano Zappa.

In the South American zone the Argentines played Paraguay, Uruguay

There is an Art to Washing Fabrics

The prosaic is glorified. With clothes becoming lovelier and more fragile, washing has become a real art—but a very simple art, for all that. Miss Kathryn Martin, here from Procter & Gamble Research Laboratories, is a Washability Expert, and she will explain how you can wash the most delicate of fabrics—how to keep colors from running—how georgette should be washed—what temperature of water should be used—at what stage to iron different fabrics—how easy it is to save on cleaners' bills, by washing fabrics that you never dreamed would wash. It is all so simple—so easy—and takes so little time and effort when one knows how. Come and learn how. And what plays a big role and helps to make this art effortless is Ivory Snow, 2 boxes 25c

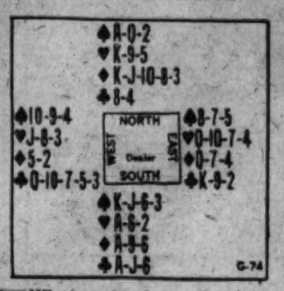
THE WAY TO FINESSE.



THE above hand was played in a Contract game. South bid two No Trumps and North, having a 13-count bid four. South, however, had bid on a minimum, he appreciated that while a slam was possible there was not enough chance of it to justify bidding for it.

At Auction South's one No Trump would obtain the contract.

When the hand was played, West led a small Club, and East's King was won by South's Ace. South then led the Ace of Diamonds and followed it with a small Diamond, finessing in dummy. East won with the Queen, led another Club and West ran four Clubs—making five tricks for the adversaries and setting the Declarer two tricks.

The Correct Play.

The Declarer made an error which is quite common. After winning the first Club and having that suit guarded if West led it but not if the lead came from East, South should have finessed the Diamonds so that if the finesse lost West would be in the lead. To trick 2 he should have led a Spade winning with dummy's Ace or Queen, and then have led either the Jack or Ten of Diamonds from dummy, finessing if East did not play the Queen.

When that finesse won, a second Diamond could be led from dummy and the Nine played from the South hand, and then the Ace of Diamonds to drop East's Queen and establishing the suit in dummy. Next dummy would be put in with a Spade to cash the two long Diamonds, South discarding one Heart and one Club. After that dummy would lead a Spade and South would cash his King and Jack of Spades. Then Declarer would win with the Ace and King of Hearts, but lose the thirteenth trick to the adversaries.

Played in that way, twelve tricks would be made. Even with the Queen of Diamonds on the wrong side, the adversaries could have made only two tricks.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS."

IF May 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:10 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 4 p. m. to 5:50 p. m. and from 8:35 p. m. to 10:15 p. m. The danger hours are from 8:45 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 6 p. m. to 7:30 p. m.

The astrological signs of May 19 indicate strange and curious influences, which are apt to bring about sweeping changes in plans to which you are practically committed. Delay in consummation may be anticipated; nothing should be rushed, as there is danger in precipitancy.

A child born on this May 19, will have rather a melancholy temperament and should be schooled to see the humorous aspect of life. It will never achieve much success, always being afraid of itself or of "coming a cropper." It will work only well along conservative lines.

Born on May 19, your tastes are rather fastidious, and you are not what the world calls a "good mixer." Notwithstanding a certain lack of congeniality and spontaniety, your horoscope indicates a large measure of success, as a result of your straightforwardness, your direct methods, and your sound judgment. One thing, however, is certain: you will never progress unless allowed to choose your own field of endeavor and to elect your own associates.

You are altruistic and incapable of mean thoughts or underhand actions. You never aim to "put one over" on your neighbor, and quickly detect and resent any effort on your neighbor's part to "put one over" on you. Dependability is also one of your strong assets, and you would rather "crash" than let down any one who confides in you.

Your disposition is affectionate. The probability is that, only later in life, will you find "the one," who, in your opinion, is capable of "filling the bill." When such a one is discovered, and the attraction is reciprocal, a sure and lasting union will result, and harmony will be undisturbed by change of conditions or circumstances. Your home, then, will be your chief joy, and you will never fail in trying to make pleasant its surroundings and atmosphere.

Au Interprets the Mode

White satin wedding gown, beautifully incrusted. The long veil, of fine silk voile edged with paillettes, hangs from a mesh cap of paillettes and strass. (Courtesy of Jenny, Paris.)

New York, May 18.

OUR dear women! Home-bodies, most of them! Their husband and children a career, if they are fortunate, or a discreet and withering preoccupation with flowers or books if all men had passed them by! Was that not the definition of a "feminine" woman of just a few decades ago, when skirts were long, and coiffures, and when womanly curves were the mode?

And I noted with amusement that here are we, feminine women again, with our womanly curves, and long skirts and newly long tresses! And wondered, with just a hint of dismay, whether we would become the useless, bored and boring woman of the past. I needn't have worried. Clothes may affect one's character, but we have tasted physical and mental freedom, have entered man's world and found it good, and all the feminine clothes in the world would never bring us back to the enslaved state of our grandmothers!

One most excellent example of the new woman is Mlle. Raymonde Latour—five years of not only in Paris, but abroad, active journalism and reporting with connections with foreign magazines in many lands, and a record in aviation that many a man would envy! She has in fact just returned to Paris from a seven months' air trip through South America, and she will soon publish a book telling of the official mission she accomplished there.

Wide apart indeed are the fields in which Mlle. Latour is interested—journalism and aviation. But it is journalism which now absorbs her attention, and possibly the most interesting branch of it—fashion. There is not one phase of fashion that escapes this chic and fascinating woman—even men's fashions are an open book to her! She knows, and practices on her own smart person, the value of the sweeping skirt, the shinning fascination of the long coiffure—she is a feminine woman! And a leader. And the answer to all of us who feared what a return to feminity would let us in for.

* * * *

And speaking of the feminine woman, what is dearer to her heart than lovely lingerie? She knows that loveliness isn't a question of the number of yards of lace on each undie—it's the material the undie is made of, and the way it fits! And if she's wise she will sit right down and send her stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet that tells her just how to make the most gorlicious set of summer lingerie that she could ever want to possess!

* * * *

A bride as lovely as a flower—in gleaming and misty white, fragile as the flying mist from a waterfall—the perfect setting for the perfect occasion! I always have loved to see brides and to sketch 'm, and this one from Jenny certainly realizes my fondest wishes. Isn't it really lovely, this gown of gleaming wedding satin, with its bias incrustations on bodice and skirt? Those on the skirt, you see, mold it closely about the hips and fall into the fullest of folds at the even hem line. The sleeves are long and tight, with a very graceful double cuff.

And the veil—that most important part of all the ensemble! This one is of silk voile, so very, very fine that it is more imagined than seen. Perhaps this is why it is edged in the smallest of sparkling paillettes. The veil hangs from a tiny, closely-fitted cap of wide silken mesh, entirely covered with paillettes and strass.

Summer furs will interest you right now. So read Dare's weekly fashion letter in next Sunday's Washington Post.

Au Revoir.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Is He Average—or Plus?

FRANCES M'DONALD: I have read your column ever since my arrival here last fall, and am going to express myself concerning your article entitled "Door Mats and Gold-Diggers." I would like to know exactly how you would desire the young man of today to act. You call us pampered and soft; we are worthless and impose on the modern girls.

Are we to go out and foolishly start building railways, cutting through woods, starting farms, and so on, as did our pioneer forefathers? I admire them, and feel grateful to them, but their methods were of their day. The young man of today is unable to make the brilliant rises in industry that his father, or grandfather made, because they had no corporations to buck. We are energetic I insist, and not the least bit backward about attacking the fields of law, medicine, foreign service, even though these fields are full. We are inspired by the thought that there is always room for a good man. We are not physically weak, if that is what you insinuate. I know that at the first call of war, I would be on hand. Yes, I am not of any brute or belligerent nature. I merely would kill for my rights and the country as did our predecessors. What I am aiming at is that we have no reason to be the master-men physically, but we are earnestly striving to be of value mentally.

I am afraid that Dorothy's main difficulty is that she is with the wrong group of people. I know of not one fellow that is the despicable type Dorothy has encountered. We are all willing and anxious to take girls out and try to show them a good time. About once every three months the girls will invite us to a party or the like. If we are "broke," we make the best of it and stay away till money becomes more plentiful. We don't expect the girl to do the inviting; all we want is that the girl shows that she has appreciated the entertainment that we have offered her. We generally choose a girl that is talkative, has a good sense of humor, knows what's going on in some degree, can be serious when the time arrives, can dance, swim and be pleasant.

I know of little more than we want out of just a date, as we have no intention of marrying every girl we entertain. I know that we would not think of borrowing from a girl, but the girls should realize that a fellow can really become financially embarrassed and has no infinite source of gold from which he can draw.

We males have become the least bit afraid of the ideas of girls. Few girls remain, I believe, that would ride a street car to a dance. Every fellow can not avail himself of a car, and so becomes afflicted with an inferiority complex, because many others have. We feel that a girl would be insulted if asked to go in less than a taxi if her escort lacked his own transportation. The girls demand a lot these days, but the average boy tries to supply them.

In conclusion, I wish to say the modern girl (average, of course) is a mighty swell creation; they are good company, alive, happy and real sports. I believe the fellows, too, try to be all of that, and also they try to be men, but it seems the older generation can see no manliness other than physical, though if I have anything to do about it, they will have to learn that brute strength signifies more the animal, while man, who is the highest type of creature, is high because of his brain. That's the difference between an ape and a human being. Most sincerely,

AVERAGE YOUNG MAN.

Now do not go and get conceited, but you are not an average youth of the day. You are plus. How about it, girls? How many girls have had the same experience as Dorothy with youths who considered their society sufficient thrill for any girl? How many girls have done as Dorothy did—and given up dates entirely simply because the heroes were so downright cheap. Come on, girls, let us hear the whole story. Do you expect the Boy Friend to chop down forests—or just to pay his way like a man? Tell us you experience with the young Lochinvars of 1931!

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

I AM an amateur gardener. Please tell me if shredded cattle manure applied to my ground in combination with bonemeal and wood ashes will improve the soil. EARL, S.

Yes, you may use all three of these fertilizers, but use them in rather small amounts. Apply enough bonemeal to whiten the soil. There is no danger of using too much. Bonemeal adds active food properties to the soil for at least twelve months. Wood ashes contain potash, a property which is found in insufficient quantities in almost all soils; however, if you have some hardwood ashes you may add it to the soil of your flower borders. Use only a light covering and turn it under with a hoe. Spread a light covering of the shredded manure over the soil and turn it under with a fork. The manure should be added some days in advance of planting.

Please tell me how to care for a sword plant. I have had the plant only two weeks and the leaves are already beginning to turn yellow.

A CONSTANT READER.

Keep your plant in a sunny place and water it thoroughly every other day, also sponge the foliage twice a week. A few hours' dryness of the soil, close to the roots of the plant, might be responsible for the ends of the leaves becoming dry. Gas fumes will also cause this condition. For this reason the plant should be given plenty of fresh air.

The neighborhood in which I live is continually troubled with cats. In one large bed I have many expensive tulips planted, and these pests are uprooting the bulbs. Will red pepper cause the cats to keep away from the bed and will it injure my bulbs if used? RICHARD L.

The only practical suggestion I have to offer is to screen the bed with coarse chicken wire. Red pepper will not injure the bulbs.

Please tell me how to start rose and geranium cuttings. K. B.

Make cuttings 2½ inches long. Root them in sand, and when rooted transplant into soil. Geranium cuttings always take root readily, but in the case of the rose even the experienced growers with every facility in the way of propagating house lose a certain percentage of their cuttings.

Please tell me how to get rid of gnats which fly about my house plants. A. J. Z.

Constant spraying with cold water will soon rid your plants of these pests. The secret of success is to spray constantly and daily. Spraying occasionally when you think about it is of no use.

Please tell me whether I should plant my ivy, an English variety, on the north or the south side of my house. HELEN B. L.

English ivy does best in a northern exposure.

Please tell me whether you think it is wise to spray hollyhocks, which were last year attacked by a fungus disease, with Bordeaux mixture. MRS. WILLIAM B. P.

Yes; I would spray them now and again in June.

Your Name
WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

THE family name "Perkins" is found with an extremely large number of variations. Some of the commonest are "Parkin," "Parkins", "Parkinson", "Parkyn" and "Parkynson." These names are all English variations of the French personal name "Pierre." "Pierre" (English "Peter") is ultimately of Greek origin, and means "rock" or "stone." An English record of the fourteenth century includes the names of Johannes Parkynson and John Perkyn.

It has been noticed in an earlier article of this series that the family name "Hollis" is a corrupted form of "Hollins," and that such a change is not an unusual one in the development of English names. In a similar way the family name "Perkins" has sometimes been corrupted to "Perkiss," and "Parkins" has been corrupted to "Parkiss." There is evidence that in some cases "Parkiss" has undergone a further change to "Parks" and has occasionally been shortened to "Park."

The family name "Pankhurst," is of English origin. It is a shortened form of "pennock-hurst," which means "the woods near the small bridge," and indicates the place of residence of the persons who were first so called. Most families which bear this name have received it because of a former residence in Pankhurst, East Sussex.

The family names "Pancoast" and "Pancrust" are corruptions of "Pankhurst," and may therefore be translated "he who lives at the woods near the small bridge." "Pancrust" is found in the English records, but its corruption to "Pancoast" appears to have originated in the United States. A certain Agnes Pancrust is known to have settled in New England in 1635.

Why risk unknown substitutes
when you know Kotex is safe

Sanitary protection must be made with strictest care, like Kotex, to protect health in every way
SURFACE resemblance to Kotex is not enough! Your sanitary protection must be clean, like Kotex, through and through. Hygienically clean. Made under rigid sanitary conditions. Only then can you know your health is protected in every way.
You have this assurance with Kotex. It's the world's standard. Hospitals use it—it fully meets their requirements.
But how about substitutes?
But how is one to know about nameless substitutes, of whose makers you know nothing? How are they made? Where? What assurance have you of their fitness for this purpose?
You have a right to know—these questions vitally concern your health. Accept no sanitary protection that cannot answer them to your complete satisfaction, and guarantee your safety.
Supremely comfortable—

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

THE CAUSE OF THE HUMAN FORM.

If you live away from the seaside you are liable to have a square head and a broad face, and to tend towards shortness and fatness. If you live close to the sea and get plenty of iodine in your food and water and in the mists you breathe, you are liable to be long headed, with a narrow face; to be tall and thin, and to sing bass. These are conclusions found in a most scientific book written by a scientific man, Prof. C. B. Stockard of Cornell University, and based on years of experimentation with animals. Perhaps Dr. Stockard can be persuaded to write another book on the same subject, using simpler language and omitting some of his technical proof of his position. That we will have to take on faith in the writer.

If his theory is correct the long-headed, long-legged Norseman is of that type because he has easy access to the sea. The round headed Alpine is as he is because he has not ready access to the sea. For the same reason the Alpine people have much goiter, myxedema, and cretinism, and the Norse people have little. The broad faced, round heads he calls laterals. The tall, sharp faced, long heads he calls linears. The laterals not only have broad heads and faces but their eyes are wide apart, the eye socket and eyeball are of types that make for nearsightedness, they are apt to have tenor voices because of the build of the voice box, the neck is apt to be short, and to show a goiter tendency. They like to eat candy and other starchy and sweet foods, and they tend to put on fat, and often develop diabetes. Mentally they are prone to show preparedness and to follow through. They have a mind for details. The linear type are the opposite physically, mentally, and temperamentally.

Dr. Stockard's conclusions are based largely on work done with lower animals. He is of the opinion that personality is largely dependent on physical constitution, meaning size, body build, and development of certain organs. The ductless glands, and particularly the thyroid gland, have much to do with growth patterns, the rate of growth, the size and shape of the features. The rate of oxidation which the thyroid regulates is the machinery used to modify the growth patterns.

Dr. Stockard closes his book by an appeal to physicians not to leave the correlation between personality and disease, on the one hand, and bodily shape, on the other, to phrenologists, fortune tellers and other fakers.

COVERED BY CITY LAW.

Mrs. M. E. writes: How soon after a child has recovered from whooping cough is it advisable to bring another child who has not had it to visit him?

REPLY.

Obey your city ordinance. That point is covered by it.

Whooping cough is very contagious just before the cough begins. It is quite contagious during the first two weeks after it begins. Count from the onset of coughing, not from the onset of whooping or of vomiting. It is mildly contagious for, say, two weeks longer. As a rule, the danger of infection after that is nothing.

If the visiting child is under 2 years of age measure these weeks with a 'coon skin and throw in the tail.

MANY SYMPTOMS AND CAUSES.

Miss B. V. writes:

1. What are the symptoms of gall stones?

2. What causes them?

1. In more than half the instances, gall stones cause no symptoms. In many instances, they cause symptoms for a while and then stop. The symptoms of gall stones are due to the location of the stone and its mobility more than to the stone itself. Among the symptoms are dyspepsia, heartburn, sour stomach, burning in the stomach, hyperacidity, jaundice, and gall stone colic.

2. Among the causes are obesity, age, sex, infections (particularly typhoid), and maybe faulty eating habits and constipation.

(Copyright, 1931, Z. A. S.)

Don't forget Wednesday noon is the deadline in the sixth week of the Post-Zain Amateur Ad Writing contest. You folks who are not writing lots of ads every day are missing heaps of fun and the chance of winning the $100 first prize or one of the many other worthwhile prizes that are being given at the close of this current period of ad writing.

Remember there is only one more week left after this sixth period of ad writing closes. Here are some more daily suggestions about some of the 35 participating concerns. They might suggest that $100 prize winning ad to you. Let's have more and more ads—your greatest opportunity to win is right now.

In writing those just wonderful ads about Wilkins' just wonderful coffee, stress the quality, freshness and price of this famous coffee. Here are a few tips:

Wilkins Coffee is rosted right here in Washington—and rushed, fresh daily, to thousands of grocers by a fleet of fast delivery trucks. The delicious roaster-freshness of this coffee is triple-sealed in economical cartons that cost less than a penny each. No expensive container is needed to preserve Wilkins freshness. It is as fresh as this morning's news. It is always fresh.

Tremendously Popular.

The tremendous popularitly of Wilkins coffee has made possible its low price. But don't let the low price fool you. Wilkins really is fine coffee—even though it costs so little—less than a cent a cup, with sugar and real cream added! Wilkins combines true coffee enjoyment with worthwhile economy.

Edmonston & Co. shoes provide splendid opportunity for you ad writers. Don't have a fit when you buy shoes, buy from Edmonston & Co. and get a fit. In addition to having a skilled staff to courteously, efficiently and correctly fit you, this company sells the Physical Culture Shoe for women and the Stacy-Adams Shoe for men. This concern is also noted for its deep interest in the welfare of children, as far as shoes are concerned.

The Edmonston line is made with the utmost precision, conforming in every particular to the outlines of the human foot, so that comfort is the firm foundation upon which style rests.

Offers Abundant Material.

The Home Laundry is another concern which offers an abundance of material for prize-winning ads. Tell about their fleet of delivery trucks, their efficient competent force of employes. Their double check system which results in your laundry being returned spotlessly clean and ready for wear. Remember this laundry is not only a laundry for the home but the home of courteous employes. Tell about their astonishingly low prices. Don't overlook the box of special prizes. Remember folks, everyone who writes an ad about this concern gets two 50-cent vouchers which can be applied on two bundles of laundry.

Underwood & Underwood portrait studios give you a great opportunity to show your skill. Writing a good advertisement for them should be simple. Use sentiment and heart appeal but be sure you include the reasons why a prospective purchaser should choose their studio. Remember their prices are no higher than by first class studio. Their artists are the country's best. But be brief. Long sentences or paragraphs are not usually read in advertising and we'd suggest that you avoid poetry. Use dignified language and keep your meaning clear. Write one now while it's on your mind. Many things are in one best on the spur of the moment.

Time Left to Win Post Zain Ad Contest Prize of $1,000

Entries in Sixth Week to Be Closed at Noon Tomorrow.

Down the home stretch!

Are you going to be a winner in this sixth week of The Post-Zain $10,000 amateur ad contest? You can make $100 today if you will get busy and write lots and lots of ads. Time is flying, but there is still time for the hustler—tomorrow noon is the deadline. All your ads must be in by that time to be considered in this week's judging. Remember, the idea is what counts, not punctuation, art work, layout or spelling. Come on, everybody! Let's really get down to business and write ads about every one of the 35 concerns. Only one more week after the sixth period closes and the contest will be over. You can be the one to win that $1,000 grand award.

Think how many chances you have to be a winner for this sixth period. In addition to the $100 first prize you have an opportunity to win a $25 order on Underwood & Underwood, $25 order on Goldsmith & Co., 5 pounds of Avignone Freres candy or 10 pounds of Wilkins' "Just Wonderful" Coffee. What's more, you have 280 chances to win attractive merchandise prizes and all those special prizes the participating concerns are giving.

Every day you hear people say they like this or that and it came from so and so. That very idea they are expressing might be the $100 prize-winning thought if they would only put it on paper and send it to the editor of The Post-Zain ad-writing contest at The Washington Post.

You do the same thing. Instead of verbally expressing an idea, write it in ad form and win a prize. That very idea you think isn't good may be just the one the judges will select as the big prize winner. It certainly is worth putting a 2-cent stamp on and mailing to the contest editor or bringing it in person. Every one like yourself is an amateur. All advertising and newspaper employes are barred from the contest.

Remember, too, that when that $100 winner is announced, if he or she is a daily and Sunday subscriber to The Washington Post, he will receive an additional $10 in cash, and the grand award winner will receive $50 in cash, provided the subscription is entered in the books of The Post. Read the special box listing this additional prize for further details.

Don't be one of those folks—and there will be many of them when this contest closes—who will say, "Oh, why did I wait? Why didn't I send in more of my ideas. They were just as good as those that won prizes." Send them in now before it is too late. Wednesday will soon be here. You still have time, however, to slide to the home plate by rushing your ads in now, and be called "safe" before the clock strikes 12, Wednesday noon.

Quick results at low cost is consistent with Post Classified Ads.

Bay Ferry Protest Is Heard by Court

Appeals Justice Sits With Wheat and Adkins; Case Under Advisement.

A new court procedure was inaugurated yesterday when Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the District Court of Appeals, sat with Chief Justice A. A. Wheat and Associate Justice Jesse Adkins in a civil case.

The unusual spectacle was brought about by the action of owners of the Annapolis-Claiborne Ferry in protesting the permission given by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Chesapeake Beach Railway to construct a ferry across Chesapeake Bay to the other side of the bay.

The "certificate" granted by the commission was issued, the plaintiffs said, without due showing of public need. The counsel for the railway contended that a proper showing had been made by the railroad and that, furthermore, the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission was not subject to attack by the ferry company.

Governmental counsel likewise contended that the action of the commission was not subject to review by the courts. The matter was taken under advisement. For the ferry company George E. Edelin and Jessie I. Miller, of the District bar, and Philip B. Perlman, former secretary of state for Maryland, appeared. J. C. Gibson, of the law firm of Olcott, Holmes, Glass & Paul & Havens, appeared for the railway, while Nelson Thomas represented the commission and Elmer Collins the Government.

He added, however, that he felt the depression in Europe as about at the bottom. Remington Rand's domestic business showed some gain in April.

W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of Chevrolet Motor Co., said the company's manufacturing plants are now operating an average of six days and five nights a week, while the nine assembly plants throughout the country are now on a five and one-half day week basis, a normal rate for both groups. The total company payroll is now in excess of 36,000 employes and some plants are on a heavier productive basis than at any time since the fall of 1929.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

PROBABLY because the commotion occasioned by wide-angle photography and projection has largely subsided, Hollywood is permitting itself to become all hot and bothered over a new photographic innovation.

A young Mexican optical engineer, Gabriel Garcia Moreno, has invented what he and his associates claim is the first practical motion picture camera with a continuous movement of film passing by the point of exposure.

All motion picture cameras, from Thomas A. Edison's time honored "black box" and its European contemparies down to date, have been built on the intermittent plan by which the film is driven before the aperture, one frame, or picture, at a time. In Moreno's camera, the film flows smoothly and continuously before the aperture without pause for exposure, according to the Associated Press news dispatches. The continuous movement requires no shutter, is free from vibration and is silent.

Since the advent of the talking pictures, engineers have been working on silent cameras, but have not as yet been successful in achieving complete silence. This is due to the intermittent mechanism which causes a distinct "clicking." Cameras being used in Hollywood studios now are boxed or hooded when in the presence of the sensitive microphone.

At the now standard intermittent film speed of 50 feet per minute, the exposure time per picture frame is one forty-eighth of a second. With the continuous camera, and at a continuous film speed of 90 feet a minute, the exposure time per picture is about twice as long, or one twenty-fourth of a second. The result is a standard exposure with 50 per cent less illumination, thereby increasing photographic values and cutting the cost of an important item in the overhead—both literally and figuratively—of film production.

The young inventor has, concurrently with the development of his camera, applied the continuous principle to projection machines. Among its advantages, and the principal ones so far as movie audiences are concerned, are the elimination of flicker and less danger from fire, since the amount of light is cut in half.

Moreno worked as a bank clerk in the City of Mexico, Juarez and Laredo, Mexico, to make a living and enough money to carry on his experiments. After he had built his first camera he journeyed to Hollywood, but it was six months before he could interest any one in his invention.

Now he is the president of a closed corporation and the picture producers are testing the new camera, with adoption of its use planned if it fulfills all of the claims of its maker. Move over for a new millionaire, if it does.

It just goes to show the power of example.

Reasonably close on the heels of Louis Ribivitski, of the Warner forces in the Capital, and Pauline Cudlip, formerly of the United Artists' Washington branch film exchange, come William R. Fischer and Violet Goldberg, who plan to be married in the fall.

Mr. Fischer, you must know, is assistant manager of Loew's Columbia Theater, and Miss Goldberg, a trifle less in the public eye, a member of the staff of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch exchange in this city, presided over by the polished and urbane Mr. Rudolph—"Rudy" to you if you're a buyer—Berger. October 6, which is by way of being a Tuesday, has been set as the wedding day.

Marking another slight deviation from its usual custom, the Metropolitan Theater will inaugurate the run of the Warner Bro.'s production of "Svengali," the dialogue version of "Trilby," starring John Barrymore, on Thursday of this week. The presentation will be in conformity with the theater's regular policy of continuous showings and popular prices.

John Barrymore's contract with the Warner Bros., by the way, has run out with the completion of "The Mad Genius," and Mr. Barrymore, according to last reports, has not as yet been articled to appear further under their auspices or for any other producing company, although it is widely bruited about that Paramount would be pleased to sign him for a talking version of "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," with which Frederic March's name has been associated more closely than anybody else's to date.

All of which seems to be a source of intense worry to Mr. Barrymore. So prostrated is he that at present he is enjoying a cruise on his private yacht in Mexican waters and, immediately following that, plans a trip to Alaska to hunt big game!

And Mr. Lundy, of the loewcal Loew forces, informs me that his organization is again going in for "names" in its stage shows. The first of importance to the Capital will be Wesley Eddy, who returns shortly to the Palace. Three weeks behind Mr. Eddy will come Teddy Joyce, another favorite with the Thirteenth and F fans. But that, so I am told, is only a starter.

Coming down to the office yesterday, I was struck by the sight of a large motor hearse parked immediately in front of one of the most elaborate miniature golf courses in northwest Washington.

This, I presume, is to be taken to mean that the game is dead?

YEARS OF GRACE - - - By Margaret Ayer Barnes

SYNOPSIS.

Jane Ward, 14, agrees to stage a puppet show of "Camille" with her young French playfellow, Andre Durez, who gives her a copy of the book to read. It is discovered by her mother and older sister, Isabel, who are horrified. Jane is forbidden to read the book and she has to confess to Andre that her mother will not let her. But Andre understands.

ANDRE.

CHAPTER III.

"I DON'T see why you want to go go to college," said Muriel, "at all."

Jane was taking lunch with Muriel. And Jane was very different. Her sleek brown pigtails had vanished, turned up in a knot on her neck beneath a big, black hair ribbon. Her skirts were down to her boot tops and her dresses, though they were still made by Miss McKelvey, had a subtly young-ladyfied air. Jane was 16. It was September. Jane would be 17 in May.

Muriel was sixteen, too, of course, and the seven black finger curls had been twisted into two, that hung down her back under a black hair ribbon, just like Jane's, and she wore a thick, cloudy bang on her white forehead and her eyes were bigger and bluer than ever and her eyelashes longer and even more curly.

Muriel sat down at the piano and began to play "Ta-ra-ra-ra Boom-de-ay," singing, as her hands rattled over the keys.

"A sweet Tuxedo girl you see,
Queen of swell so-ci-e-ty,
Fond of fun as fond can be,
When it's on the strict Q.T.!"

Edith and Rosalie and Jane all joined uproariously in the chorus.

"Ta-ra-ra-ra Boom-de-ay! Ta-ra-ra-ra Boomde-ay!

Ta-ra-ra-ra Boomde-ay! Ta-ra-ra-ra Boomde-ay!"

"That song," said Mrs. Lester comfortably, as she picked up her knitting, "will always make me think of the World's Fair." The celebrated Columbian Exposition had been running all summer down in Jackson Park. Muriel slipped easily into "After the Ball," the great grand hit of the season. She sang the popular parody with pathos, as she played.

"After the Fair is over, what will Chicago do
With all those empty houses, run up with sticks and glue?
I'd rather live in Brooklyn (somebody'd know me there)
Than to live in Chicago, after—the —Fair."

"We ought to go out there again some night for dinner," said Rosalie, "before it gets too cold."

Muriel stopped playing.

"Let's go this week," she said. "Let's go tomorrow night."

"Let's have a party," said Rosalie. "Who do you want to ask?" asked Mrs. Lester. "Besides Freddy."

This was just like the Lesters. No sooner said than done.

"I don't care," said Rosalie. "Let Muriel have some kids. It's her last fling. School begins next week."

"Flora," said Muriel promptly, "and Jane, of course, and Teddy Stanley—he's just crazy about Flora—and Bob Withers for me and—When does Andre get home, Jane?"

"I don't know," said Jane. And she really didn't. He hadn't said in his last letter from Paris. Jane hadn't seen Andre for three months.

"He's got to be back for School," said Muriel. "I'll give him a ring."

The Lesters' new butler appeared in the door.

"Miss Jane Ward?" he asked hesitatingly. He hadn't been there long enough to know Jane's name. "You're wanted on the telephone, miss."

Jane got up in astonishment. She was very seldom wanted on the telephone anywhere. A call in some one else's house was very exciting. Muriel went with her out into the back hall.

"Hello," said Jane.

It was Andre's voice. She knew it immediately. It wasn't quite the same, though. A little huskier and deeper. It made Jane feel very queer to hear it. Andre really sounded like a man.

"Yes. It's me," she said ungrammatically.

"Who is it?" asked Muriel.

"I called up your house," said Andre. "They said you were over at Muriel's."

"Yes. I am," said Jane rather unnecessarily.

"I—I want to see you," said Andre

"Who is it?" asked Muriel, again.

"When did you get back?" said Jane politely.

"This noon," said Andre.

"Well," said Jane, "why don't you come over?"

"Over to Muriel's?" inquired Andre. His voice seemed a little doubtful.

"Oh, no," said Jane quickly. "Over to my house. I'll go home."

"All right," said Andre. "How—how are you?"

"Oh, I'm fine," said Jane.

"Well," said Andre, "I'll be right over."

"All right," said Jane. She hung up the receiver.

"Who was it?" asked Muriel.

Jane turned to face her. She was laughing a little. She didn't know why.

"It was Andre," she said.

Muriel began to giggle.

"I thought you didn't know when he was coming home."

"I didn't," said Jane, and started for the door into the front hall.

"Where are you going?" asked Muriel.

"Home," said Jane. "He's coming over."

Muriel seemed to think that was natural enough.

"Ask him to come to-morrow," she said.

Jane was putting on her hat.

"All right," she said. She was at the front door before she remembered her manners. She went straight back into the living-room, and shook hands with Mrs. Lester.

"I had a lovely time, Mrs. Lester," said Jane. Mrs. Lester looked a little bewildered, but Jane didn't stop to explain. It certainly wasn't necessary. As soon as she reached the hall she heard Muriel giggling about it in the living room.

It seemed a little strange to be talking to Andre like this, quite seriously, on the library sofa.

"Is Isabel in?" asked Jane, as soon as Minnie opened the front door.

"No," said Minnie.

"Is mamma?" asked Jane.

"No," said Minnie again.

"Minnie," said Jane confidentially, "I'm going to have a caller."

Minnie looked very much surprised.

"It's Andre," said Jane. "When he comes just take him into the library and say you will tell me. And, Minnie," said Jane almost pleadingly, "don't call up the stairs."

She ran up the stairs and hurried into her bedroom. She took off her little sailor hat and went up to her bureau and began to do over her hair. She parted it very neatly and pulled it down over her forehead in front and pinned up the braid under the black hair ribbon and wished, terribly, that she had a curly bang like Muriel's. Then she pulled her belt two holes tighter over her white shirt waist and looked critically at her figure in the mirror. Her waist was all right. It was really just as small as Muriel's. It was smaller than Flora's. The door bell rang just as she arrived at that comforting decision. She took a clean handkerchief out of her upper bureau-drawer and put three drops of German cologne on it and tucked it in her belt.

Minnie appeared at the door. She was smiling all over.

"He's come," she said. "He looks awful big."

Jane ran down the stairs feeling very much excited. She glanced at herself once more in the mirror under the hat-rack and then passed on to the library door. Andre was standing on the hearth rug. He did look awfully big, and somehow broader about the shoulders. His coat sleeves were just a little short for his arms. As soon as he saw Jane he broke into a beaming smile.

"Hello, Jane," he said.

Jane was smiling, too, all over She walked quickly over to him and held out her hand. His closed completely over it. He didn't let it go immediately.

"I'm awfully glad to see you," he said.

His voice was certainly very different. And his cheeks, though just as red, looked just a little darker and harder. Jane realized, with a sudden blush, that Andre had begun to shave. She almost felt as if she oughtn't to have noticed a thing like that.

"Won't you sit down?" said Jane politely.

"Won't you?" said Andre with a smile.

Jane suddenly realized that she hadn't. They both laughed, then, and sat down side by side on the sofa near the hearth.

"I think we might have the fire," said Jane a little doubtfully. Isabel had it, always, when she had callers. "It's not very cold, but it makes the room look nicer."

Andre jumped up again and struck a match and lit the paper under the birch logs.

"I love this room, anyway," said Andre. "It looks just like you."

Andre sat down again beside her on the sofa.

"What happened to you this summer?" asked Andre. "You look awfully grown-up."

"It's my hair," said Jane, referring to the knot on her neck. "Nothing happened to any of us except the World's Fair."

"I must go right down there," said Andre. "I never really saw it before we sailed in June."

"Muriel wants you to go tomorrow night," said Jane, and unfolded the plan. Andre was delighted. He could go, of course.

"And what have you been doing all summer?" asked Jane, when they had exhausted the subject of Muriel's party. She had a most delightful sensation of being a real young lady Leading the conversation, like a hostess, with ease and distinction from one subject to another. But it seemed a little strange to be talking to Andre like this, quite seriously on the library sofa instead of up on the playroom window seat or out in the side yard beneath the willow tree

His face lit up at the question.

"Oh, Jane!" he said. "It's been great. You would have just loved it I couldn't tell you in my letters I—I hated to come back, really, except—except—" His voice broke a little and sounded young and trembly. He didn't look at her. "Except for you."

That made him seem like the same old Andre. Jane felt that happy feeling again, deep down inside. But she didn't know just what to say to him.

"Tell me what it was like," she ventured, after a little pause.

He began then, in a great rush, just as he always did when he wanted to share things with her. Jane's eyes grew big and round as she listened, and they never left his face. It sounded just like books. Different books, and all of them nice ones. June in London lodgings. That was like "Punch" and Dickens and Thackeray. And July in his grandfather's house in Bath. That was like Jane Austen. And August and September in Paris, working with his clay in an artist's studio, living with his father in a garret bedroom on the Rue de l'Universite, eating at little iron tables on the sidewalks of cafes, and drinking at them too, red wine in carafes, as every one did in France, why—that was just like "Trilby." The book that Rosalie had lent to Isabel and Jane had read, knowing perfectly well that she shouldn't, that it wasn't at all the kind of book her mother would wish her to read.

"A real artist, Andre?" she asked. "In a real studio?"

"You bet he was. A friend of Rodin's. He wouldn't have let me mess around except that he had always known my father. I learned a lot from him. More than in any regular class. I—I did a study of your hands, Jane. I brought it back to show you."

Jane stared entranced. Why, this was just like "Trilby." Trilby's beautiful bare foot—and Little Billee.

"Andre! I'll love to see it."

"It's pretty good," he said. His eyes were on her hands, clasped tight in ecstasy. "I remembered just how they were." He looked up laughing. "But you can't have it."

"Oh!" she said fervently. "I—I don't want it! I want you to keep it. I just want to see it——"

"Who lit the fire, Minnie?" said her mother's voice. Jane hadn't heard the door-bell. Her mother stood in the doorway. Andre sprang to his feet.

"It's Andre, mamma."

Her little look of annoyance over the fire faded instantly into one of surprise. She held out her hand and smiled up at Andre exactly as if he were one of Isabel's callers.

"Why, you've grown up," she said.

Andre smiled and blushed and Jane suddenly realized that he towered over both of them.

"You're quite a young gentleman," said her mother, still smiling. "Have you had a nice summer?"

"He's been working in a studio in Paris," said Jane. And realized instantly that it was the wrong thing to say. It didn't please her mother.

"Oh," she said, "in a Paris studio?"

"Yes," said Andre, confidingly. "It was lots of fun." That was the one stupid thing about Andre. He never seemed to sense what people were thinking. Was it because he never, never cared?

"Was it, indeed?" said her mother, and her tone seemed somehow to terminate Andre's call.

Jane walked to the door with him.

"I'll call up Muriel," said Andre, "and see you tomorrow night."

"Yes," said Jane.

"I am glad to be back," said Andre.

"Are you?" said Jane a little wistfully. "I'm glad you're glad."

Muriel telephoned to her after dinner. Andre was coming and so were Bob and Teddy. Flora was delighted with the plan. She was all alone in the big brown stone house. Her father had gone to New York for a board meeting and her mother had gone away rather suddenly to spend three days with her sister in Galena, who wasn't very well. Rosalie wanted Isabel to come, too. She'd get another man.

"She said to tell Isabel," said Muriel, giggling over the wire, "that she knew who."

Jane knew who, too. She must mean Robin Bridges, Isabel's latest beau. She ran back to the parlor to tell the family all about it. Isabel looked very pleased.

"That's nice of Lily Furness to go up to stay with that unattractive sister," said Jane's mother.

"And in Galena, too," said Isabel.

"Lily Furness has her nice side," said Jane's mother.

Jane went upstairs to see if her foulard frock needed pressing. It seemed to bring the party nearer to be doing something about it.

STOCK PRICES DROP IN GENERAL SLUMP

90 Issues in Composite Group Close 3.9 Points Lower for 1931.

New York, May 18 (A.P.).—The current wave of pessimism gave the rail shares and high-priced industrials and utilities a severe pummeling today, dropping all three groups used in the averages to new lows.

The decline of 3.9 points in the composite price of 90 issues was the largest since December 22. Not since December 16, the day before the long decline of last autumn and early winter halted, had all the major divisions of the market recorded new bear market minimums simultaneously.

Stocks in the lower price brackets were affected moderately, so that the decline continued to be rather selective. There was, however, more general selling of the old-time favorites and some of the losses in these shares were sharp. Prime bonds held firm, while United States Governments were strong; otherwise the investment market sympathized with the weakness of equities. Cotton reacted more than $1 a bale, and wheat and corn were heavy.

Turnover 2,500,000 Shares.

The turnover of 2,500,000 shares was far below total sales for many sessions when the decline has been smaller, indicating the thinness of the market on the buying side. It could hardly be said that substantial liquidation was not in progress, and Wall street heard rumors of selling from London as well as from investment trusts. The volume of public marginal trading in recent weeks has been so slim that contributions from that source are relatively meager.

Wide breaks in the rails and tumbles through the 100 mark by both United States Steel and American Can stood out as features of the forenoon selling. A firmer tone developed around midafternoon, but in the last hour American Telephone widened an early 4-point decline to 9⅜, and fresh selling poured in during the late trading. Steel dropped to 98¾, the lowest since 1924, and closed at 99, off 2⅜; Can's net loss was 3¼.

Atchison fell 10½, Union Pacific 6¾, New York Central 4¾, Southern Pacific 4½, National Biscuit more than 3, Norfolk & Western 6, Consolidated Gas 3½, Ingersoll-Rand 8 and International Business Machines 17. With the exception of the last named, which reduced its loss to 12, final prices of the stocks mentioned were at or close to the bottom.

Decision Affects Prices.

The Supreme Court decision in the Indiana chain store tax case seemed to affect merchandising shares, especially Kroger Grocery, which has a large string of properties in that State. Tobacco issues flopped with the renewal of cigarette price cutting, American Tobacco "B" losing 8 points. Sentiment toward the rails was not helped by reports that freight loadings for the week ended May 9 would show a substantial reduction from the previous week's total.

Although the market had the April foreign trade figures to digest over the week-end, there was no other news to affect sentiment in that interval. Money was easy, available at 1 per cent unofficially, and the Treasury operations, involving the retirement of the bill issue and payment for another, cut little or no figure. The New York Clearing House banks finally cut their deposit rates, the chief effect of which move, it is believed, will be to drive more money into bonds.

A cut in export copper to conform with the domestic price of 9 cents a pound was followed by considerable foreign buying, chiefly from London. Domestic demand remained sluggish, the assumption is that fabricators in this country are well covered.

Beneficial rains in the northwest and ledger receipts were partly responsible for the sag in wheat which closed ⅝ to ¼ lower. Cotton made new lows, reflecting better weather in the South and the weakness of the stock market. Futures were off $1.25 to $1.35 a bale net. Corn's losses were moderate, ranging from ⅜ to ¾.

Foreign exchanges were dull. Sterling firmed and the French franc eased, with only nominal changes in either case.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 18 (A.P.).—A further decline in cotton here today carried July contracts down to 9.15 or 29 points net lower and 104 points below the high price touched in the rally of May 9. This position closed at 9.17. The final tone of the market was barely steady at net declines of 25 to 27 points.

The opening was steady, 4 to 6 points lower in response to relatively easy cables and reports of good weather in the South over the week-end. Initial offerings were fairly well absorbed by some trade buying and covering, but the demand was supplied on slight bulges and the selling increased later in the morning. Part of this appeared to be coming from Wall street sources which was influenced by weakness in the stock market, while there also appeared to be considerable selling here for Southern account.

There was enough covering on scale-down orders to check the decline momentarily from time to time, but the buying was supplied on comparatively slight bulges until the market reached 9.00 for May and 9.71 for December. Covering then became a little more active and there were recoveries of about 10 to 13 points, but the market weakened again in the late trading under renewed local, Southern and Wall street selling. Closing quotations were within 2 to 4 points of the lowest.

The prospect for showers in parts of the Western belt came in for very little comment. Following the generally fair weather which set in toward the end of last week the forecast was not considered unfavorable as the temperatures were seasonal and the opinion was expressed that the crop had probably made good progress over the week-end.

Liverpool cables said there had been continental and Bombay selling in that market and reported a bearish sentiment in Manchester with the cloth and yarn turnover unimportant. Houses with New Orleans and Southwestern connections were reported among the sellers here during the day. Port receipts today, 362 bales. United States port stocks, 3,359,122. Exports today, 4,546, making 6,224,998 so far this season.

BONDS SELL LOWER AS MARKET CHANGES

General Trend Is Downward With Foreign Issues Sharing Losses.

New York, May 18 (A.P.).—The bond market declined irregularly today. Losses were most numerous among obligations of secondary or speculative rating.

However, gilt-edge issues continued their advance, and some of them reached new peak levels. The latter fact was most apparent among loans of the United States Government, six of which reached new high prices for this year, although trading in most of them was moderate. The Treasury 3⅛s of 1940-43 and of 1941-43 sold at their highest prices since issuance.

Strength appeared also among the best corporate issues but it was less marked than among the loans of the United States Government.

The trend of the market as a whole was plainly downward with the larger losses occurring among foreign, railroad and industrial obligations. Losses in the public utilities were of minor proportions. This movement followed the unsettlement in stocks.

Net declines of 1 point or more were recorded by various bonds of Brazilian, Chilean and German origin, Alleghany 5s of 1944 and of 1950, American Telephone convertible 4½s, Atchison convertible 4½s, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s of 1960 and Rock Island 4½s of 1960, St. Paul 5s of 1975 and adjustment 5s, Illinois Central 4¾s, Missouri Pacific series A 5½s, Nickel Plate series C 4½s and Remington Arms 6s. Fractional declines were numerous. Among the domestic issues several of the extreme losses were scored by bonds having stock purchase or conversion privileges. Fractional declines were numerous.

A syndicate headed by the Bankers Co. of New York was the successful bidder today for $19,337,000 of 4 and 4½ per cent bonds of the City of Detroit.

18 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1931.

VOIGT ROUTS FIRST TWO FOES IN BRITISH AMATEUR

Former Washington Star Advances to Third Round In Bid for English Title

Plays Brilliantly to Win First, 4 and 3; Second, 5 and 3.

Douglas Fairbanks Is Beaten, One Up, as Crowd Follows.

By FRANK H. KING.

WESTWARD, HO!, Devon, England, May 18 (A.P.).—George Voigt, American contender for the British amateur golfing throne Bobby Jones renounced, today marched halfway through the field of the 1931 championship tournament to the third round.

It took the slim New Yorker, formerly of Washington, D. C., 30 holes against stern opposition to win his first and second round matches. He defeated T. H. Bowman, a farmer and Norfolk champion, in the first, 4 and 3, and then disposed of Francis Francis, athletic young officer from his majesty's crack Guards regiment, in the second, 5 and 3.

Voigt will play but one round tomorrow, meeting J. R. Abercrombie, of the Royal Liverpool Club, who today defeated the American movie star, Douglas Fairbanks, 1 up.

Voigt's game was not spectacular, but it was effective. He waited for his opponent to make errors and never failed to take advantage of them. His short game was almost perfection. His best putt was on the eleventh hole, where he rammed home an 18-footer.

Shaky Start Fails to Upset Voigt.

After a somewhat shaky start, Voigt settled down to a streak of steady, consistent golf that was plenty good enough to whip Bowman, known to British experts as an extremely able match player.

The New Yorker lost the first hole when he three-putted from 10 yards, but after that Bowman never won a hole.

Voigt won the second hole when Bowman took his turn at three-putting, won the seventh and eighth and halved the ninth to turn 2 up. Voigt was 2 under even 4s for the six remaining holes of the match, winning the eleventh and thirteenth to go 4 up. He halved the fourteenth to be dormie 4 and halved the fifteenth to end the match. The cards:

Voigt, out	655	434	435—39
Bowman, out	565	434	655—43
Voigt, in	434	434
Bowman, in	444	534
Voigt, out	564	534	544—39
Francis, out	555	734	534—41
Voigt, in	434	434
Francis, in	444	534

While Voigt was the big golfing attraction of the day, Fairbanks carried away the biggest gallery and held the most of it by fairly good golf rather than any thespian activities. Fairbanks contributed to his own defeat, but marked himself a generous sportsman when he conceded his opponent's final putt. It was at least a yard away from the hole, a distance not always safe even for the best golfers. Doug apparently had other things on his mind and was not unhappy at his defeat. He left immediately after the match to meet his wife, Mary Pickford, who landed in London from the homeland.

Mothers and Babes Follow Fairbanks.

All the villagers roundabout seemed gathered on the course today, which is common land. Crowds of children played over the fairways and one youngster turned somesaults on the eighteenth green until he was shooed off so a match could be completed. A dozen mothers with their babies in prams, followed Fairbanks nearly five miles around the course, and several score schoolgirls besieged him with autograph books even in defeat.

The flocks of sheep, which keep the fairways of westward ho! (the natives insist on the exclamation mark, saying the name comes from the Kingsley novel and the old battlecry of "Westward ho! with a rumbelow, and hurra for the Spanish main, O!") were undisturbed during the day's play. The lambs bleated plaintively, babies cried, cows mooed and dogs barked and nobody paid any attention to them.

Voigt once suggested that a few sheep be moved out of the line of a mashie shot to the fifteenth green, but when one ram proved a bit stubborn, George said to let him alone as he was a good marker on the line to the pin.

Field Reduced by One-Half.

The field was reduced in half today, although some players such as Joshua Crane, American veteran, and Cyril James Hastings Tolley haven't played a single match as yet. This is caused by the intricate system of byes, which reduce the field to an even number for the third round.

Voigt appears to have a comparatively easy path ahead of him in his quarter draw, only Eric Friddian looming as a possible menace between him and the semifinals.

Five Americans fell by the wayside today, Ross Thompson, of Uniontown, Pa.; L. R. Phillips, of Santa Barbara, Calif.; Johnny de Paolo, of Los Angeles; Frank Sweeney, of London, but formerly from sunny California, and Fairbanks.

Voigt, Douglas Grant, former Californian; one Tom McGuire, of Stock, Calif., won today, and Charles Lewis, of Hollywood; E. J. Haddon, of Oakland; J. H. Forsman, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and R. B. Foster, former American, now of London, and Crane play tomorrow.

GEORGE VOIGT.

GUS CROTHERS RESIGNS.

Special to The Washington Post.

Chestertown, Md., May 18.—Omar D. (Gus) Crothers, of Elkton, Md., has resigned as head lacross coach and assistant coach in football at Washington College, it was learned today. Crothers, former all-American lacrosse player at Maryland University and member of the all-State eleven, intends to take up the study of law. He came here from Maryland last fall and will depart early next month.

Brandt in 6th Victory As Braves Trim Pirates

Boston, May 18 (A.P.).—Ed Brandt, Braves star southpaw, held the Pittsburgh Pirates to five hits today to win, 3 to 1, and score his sixth straight victory of the season. He has yet to lose a game this year.

Red Worthington's two doubles off Brame were responsible for the Braves' runs, while Ed Phillips' home run into the left field bleachers gave the Pirates their only score. The victory gave the Braves a 2-to-1 edge in the three-game series.

Foul Is Ruled Out of Title Battle

Special Law Is Made for Schmeling-Stribling Bout.

Title Will Not Pass on Foul Blow; Cash Penalty Planned.

CLEVELAND, May 18 (A.P.).—The Cleveland Boxing Commission announced tonight that the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling heavyweight title bout here July 3 will not be decided on a foul.

Apparently the main fact of the decision of the commission will be final, for both of the fighters agreed in their contracts to abide by the rules of the commission.

However, there are a lot of other possibilities concerning a foul blow which have not been settled.

Many Possibilities Concerning Foul.

It is possible, for instance, that a foul blow might be struck and one of the boxers be so injured he would be unable to continue the fight. Or it might be that one of them would claim mistakenly to be the victim of a foul, when the blow was not foul.

In either case, the purpose of the commission's rule is to prevent either of the fighters from being called the winner. But if the fight should be stopped with such an ending, there would still remain the question: "What is to be done about it?"

So the commission has indicated it will consider amending the no-foul decision rule, putting cash penalties on fouling so heavy that the fighters will be careful to keep their blows up. One plan suggested to the commission would be for the man who strikes a blow seriously foul—provided it ended the fight—to lose entirely his share of the gate receipts, while the victim of the blow would lose one-half.

Strict Rule Against Foul Considered.

The latter provision, it was contended, would make a foul blow victim also think twice before ending the fight on the claim of a foul.

Such amendments to the "no-decision on a foul" rule, have not been considered by Schmeling or Stribling. "Pa" Stribling, however, in a letter today, said he was in favor of some "no-foul" rule.

Schmeling, who won his title on a foul from Jack Sharkey in New York last June, has not commented.

Chisox Beat Red Sox, Scoring Six in Ninth

Chicago, May 18 (A.P.).—Chicago hammmered Horace Lisenbee and Ed Durham for six runs on six hits in the ninth inning today and took a thriller from the Boston Red Sox, 9-8.

Trailing five runs in the final frame, Kerr and Jeffries opened with singles and McKain walked, filling the bases. Durham replaced Lisenbee and Blue got a triple when Webb misjudged his low liner. Cissell and Reynolds were disposed of, but Jolley singled and so did Eichrodt. Simons batted for Tate and doubled to right ending the game.

Ted Lyons hurled the first seven innings for Chicago, allowing six runs on ten hits. McKain replaced him and was the winning pitcher. The victory gave Chicago three out of four in the series.

Grimes Says Smart Pitcher Uses a Minimum of Effort

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

NEW YORK, May 18 (A.P.).—As you get older you get smarter and you realize that pitching, like any other business, is a question of spreading yourself over a maximum of territory with a minimum of effort.

That's Burleigh Grimes' baseball philosophy—the embattled wanderer of the diamond, one of the few great survivors of the almost obsolete clan of spitball hurlers, is sailing serenely through his nineteenth season in the major leagues, crowding his philosophy to the limit. He has won five straight games for the St. Louis Cardinals, and if he doesn't pitch 20 more before the season is over he'll lose his belief in the kindly Santa Claus who has given him that nice new raised-seam ball to play with.

"As I got older I got more careful. I found out that trying to strike out everybody that came up to the plate didn't pay. I realized that baseball is a business and the smart thing to do is to spread that salary they pay you over as many seasons as possible."

Burleigh leaned against the rail in front of the third-base stands at

Argentine Net Team Here For Davis Cup Matches

William Robson (left) and Lucilo Costillo, members of the Argentine Davis Cup Team, who arrived here yesterday. The team practiced at the Chevy Chase Club, where it meets the winner of the United States-Canada tie on May 28, 29 and 30.

Team Greeted by Pan American Head; Takes Workout.

THE Argentine Davis Cup team, winners of the first South American Davis Cup zone, arrive in America yesterday morning from Buenos Aires and late yesterday afternoon were practicing on the "En Tout Cas" courts at the Chevy Chase Club, where the team will meet the winner of the United States vs. Canada tie on May 28, 29, and 30.

The South Americans bringing along a covey of four players and a nonplaying captain, were met at the station by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, members of the Argentine Embassy, and a committee from the Chevy Chase Club, headed by Commander C. C. Gill, who, while stationed in Brazil, several years ago, was frequently an opponent or partner of the members of the visiting team.

Edwin French, nonplaying captain of the team, ordered the practice session, believing that the process of acclimazation will be slow at best and that most of the ten days now ahead of the team before the interzone finals will be needed to condition the players to the local atmosphere.

William Robson, Lucilo Costillo, Adriano Zappa and Richard Sissener arrived yesterday with French. Robson, recognized as the greatest player in South American net history, probably will be used as a singles player. Ronaldo Boyd, now on an almost equal footing with Robson as a player, will join the team later this week.

Regardless of the outcome of the matches next week, the Argentine team will sail for England early in June to engage in the English championships at Wimbledon. While in Washington the team will stay at the Chevy Chase Club.

YANKS BEAT TIGERS IN ROUT, 20-8

16 Passes, 5 Errors by Detroit Combined With 19 Hits.

DETROIT, Mich., May 18 (A.P.).—The New York Yankees combined nineteen hits and sixteen passes and five Detroit errors to take a weird one from the Tigers today, 20 to 8, and gain an even break for the four-game series.

Four pitchers took a hand at trying to stop the Yankees, including Mark Koenig, who is a shortstop by trade, but none had any luck. In three different innings the winners batted around. After scoring eight runs in the eighth, they topped off their performance with five more in the ninth on two hits.

McManus and Doljack accounted for two of Detroit's runs off Ed Wells with homers.

Cotton Withdraws From Golf at Leeds

Sandmoor, Leeds, England, May 18 (A.P.).—Transatlantic aspirants for the premier honors of the Leeds 1,000 guineas golf tournament, opening here tomorrow, won't have their chief obstacle in the Southport event last week—Henry Cotton—to hurdle.

Cotton, winner of the $7,500 Southport tournament, scratched his entry to go direct to Carnoustie and begin practice for the British open. Abe Mitchell, who finished well up at Southport, also has scratched, but he is out because of a slight illness.

The American contingent, both North and South, was out on the course today, but most of them contented themselves with limbering up. Horton Smith, of Missouri, and Jose Jurado, captain of the Argentine squad of four, playe da round but did not keep score. Both stopped frequently to try over a shot that did not suit them.

Walberg, With Grove Aiding, Wins Sixth Game of Season.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 18 (A.P.).—The world champion Philadelphia Athletics, firmly entrenched in first place in the American League, today won their tenth straight game and sent the Cleveland Indians tumbling to sixth place by slamming out a 10 to 7 decision. It gave the Athletics a clean sweep of the four-game series.

George Walberg won his sixth game in seven starts, although he had to be rescued by Lefty Grove, who pitched a whole game Saturday and finished yesterday and today. Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia first baseman, got his second home run in two days, besides two singles, in four trips. Cochrane and Simmons also got three blows, while Potter and Vosmik got three each for Cleveland.

Bill Kamm, just obtained from the Chicago White Sox, played third for Cleveland, got two hits and drove in a run, besides playing errorless ball.

Herman Leads Robins In Smothering Reds

Brooklyn, May 18 (A.P.).—Brooklyn's latest batting power finally broke loose today and smothered four Cincinnati hurlers under a 14-4 score. The victory gave the Robins two out of three for the series.

Babe Herman found his batting eye in a big way, smashing a single, double, triple and home run in five times at bat. He drove in five runs, scored four and stole a base. His teammate, Frederick, also hit a homer.

Hollis Thurston went the route for the winners to mark up his first victory of the year.

PLAY STARTS FOR 436 IN TOURNEY

20 Post Entries in Indian Spring Golf; Opens Today.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

WITH the addition of 20 names yesterday the entry list of the Indian Spring Club invitation golf tournament, which begins this morning, now reaches the total of 436, a number unequaled in any golf club tournament in this section.

The post-entrants were assigned times which had been left vacant in the schedule as originally arranged and with the contestants qualifying in threesomes, which is an innovation in local golf events, it is hoped that the final scores will be turned in this afternoon and tomorrow before darkness overtakes the players.

The Indian Spring course was crowded yesterday with golfers playing a practice round and if low scores are not the rule instead of the exception it will not be the fault of the fairways or the greens which are in fine condition. There were very few of the topnotchers out on the course, although Harry G. Pitt, former Middle Atlantic champion, with 36—37—73, had every reason to be satisfied with his performance.

The number of out-of-town entrants is unusually large but none of

Ruth to Head Japan Tour To Test Nippon's Sluggers

BOSTON, May 18 (A.P.).—Japan has professional baseball stars just as good as Babe Ruth or Hack Wilson—at least that's what Yoshi Yuki Kagami, general passenger agent of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Steamship Lines, says.

What's more, there's going to be a chance to prove or disprove that statement, for, Kagami says, arrangements have been completed for bringing a team of fourteen American professional baseball players, including the mighty Babe himself, to Japan at the close of the present season.

Kagami, who is a nephew of Kenkishi Kagami, president of the steamship line, is honeymooning in the United States. He was a delegate to the convention of the International Chamber of Commerce in Washington and he came to Boston today to stay two or three days, and frankly admitted his interests were about equally divided between business and baseball.

Kagami said the American baseball team would meet teams in Tokyo and Osaka. He also said plans were being made to bring over to Japan a team from either Holy Cross College or Co-

Myer and Kuhel to Return to Line-Up at Chicago Today.

Nats Lack Pitchers Due to Failure of Al Crowder.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHICAGO, May 18.—Manager Walter Johnson and his Nationals arrived here early this morning, took a nap, and then, like the mailman who takes a nice long walk on his day off, hustled out to Comiskey Park to watch the Sox, White vs. Red, do battle.

Although quite disappointed at having their winning streak snapped at six in the first game of yesterday's twin bill at St. Louis, the Nationals immediately started what they predict will be another streak of even greater proportions, and give every evidence of being quite pleased with themselves.

Last year, it will be remembered, the Washington Club could do everything but win games on its Western invasions, but it seems to be different this season, and already seven victories in nine starts against Western clubs have been recorded. And, as the White Sox have been anything but impressive this season, there is no reason why Johnson's charges should not cop in at least two of the three games listed here, with the dope giving them a fine chance to clean up.

Sam Jones Seeks Third Straight.

It will be up to the veteran Sad Sam Jones to start the Nats off with a victory in the first game of the set here tomorrow. The sorrowful sage has won his last two starts and, although staggering near the finish, has gone the route. With warm weather here today and predicted for tomorrow, the sap in his aging flipper should start running, and unless he should experience an off day, something which no one can foresee, he

DERBY HORSES DISPERSE FOR NORTHERN STAKES

TwentyGrand Headed for Belmont

Equipoise Shipped to Jamaica to Recover From Injury.

Boys Howdy, Spanish Play Go to Bainbridge Derby.

LOUISVILLE, May 18 (A.P.).—With the 1931 Kentucky Derby now history, owners and trainers of the thoroughbreds which raced in the great classic today were making plans for future engagements for their charges. The Ohio Derby, the Belmont Stakes and the American Derby are next on the schedule and are expected to draw their share of Kentucky Derby horses.

The Eastern blue bloods of the turf left here yesterday. Twenty Grand, Anchors Aweigh, Surf Board, Mate and Ladder had Belmont Park as their destination. Equipoise, withdrawn from the Derby after developing a quarter crack, was sent to Jamaica to recover.

Jimmie Rowe, trainer of Twenty Grand, did not announce his plans for the Derby winner. While the Greentree Stable star is eligible for the Withers, it is not considered likely that he will be called upon to show his wares again before the Belmont Stakes.

Mate Likely Starter in Belmont.

Mate also is a likely starter in the Belmont. Trainer Jack Pryce is said to believe the 1¼ miles a little too long for Ladder and will map out his future itinerary accordingly.

Boys Howdy and Spanish Play are intended starters in the Ohio Derby at Bainbridge next Saturday. Pittsburgher and Insco also are eligible for the Ohio Derby, but their owners and trainers are undecided whether to send them to the post. Clyde Van Dusen, trainer of Sweep All, intimated that his charge will be reserved for the American Derby at Washington Park, in which he may again face Twenty Grand, Mate, Pittsburgher and Insco.

Bostwick to Send Mate To Races in England

Baltimore, Md., May 18 (A.P.).—The News quotes George Ellis, rider of A. C. Bostwick's Mate in the Kentucky Derby, as saying the Preakness winner very likely will be shipped overseas for a campaign on European tracks.

Mate finished third in Derby Saturday, losing to Twenty Grand and Sweep All, but beat the Derby winner in the Perakness at Pimlico May 9.

"Mr. Bostwick has asked me to go to Europe and ride Mate in c" of his races in England and France," Ellis was quoted. "Neither Mr. Bostwick, J. W. Healy, the trainer, nor I have any excuses to offer, but Mate should show a much better race the next time out. The mile and one-quarter Derby was his first effort at such a distance.

"Race fans con look for a real battle when Mate and Twenty Grand clash again in the American Derby this summer at Arlington Park, Illinois."

Boots and Saddle's
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)
—Churchill Downs Selections—
By J. B. SNODGRASS.

ALTHOUGH the program at the Downs is without a regular feature, the fourth event, an allowance affair for 3-year-olds and upward, to be contested over the 6-furlong sprint distance, will serve as the main attraction. This event appears to have the most class since two of the five contestants were Derby eligibles.

A well-balanced supporting card with two allowance events, together with four claiming numbers for the cheaper steeds, will round out the rather mediocre week-day list.

The designation feature should result in a victory for the consistent CAYUGA, owned by the Shay Brook Farm. This 6-year-old has won two sprints at this meeting and figures best of his four rivals. UP, from Mrs. J. N. Crofton's string, and R. W. Collins' DON LEON are closely matched, but are in this order. ANTE BELLUM and FLIMSY appear outclassed.

FIRST RACE—A limit field of 20 juveniles will face the starter in the 5-furlong dash of the opening number, under claiming conditions. ESCOBA LAND, from the Mrs. Simmons' Stable, raced well in Maryland, and with a race here as a conditioner should account for the purse. SHAKER LADY, who lost her last start in a nose finish, is capable of extending the top one. OH DAVE will be difficult to keep out of the money in this company.

SECOND RACE—The second event, an allowance affair, fashioned for 3-year-olds exclusively, attracted seven entries in the overnight number. CHENE, owned by C. V. Whitney and winner of her recent outing, has attained her best form and figures to romp to an easy victory. ALL HAIL scored impressively in his debut and rates the place call. HOPEFIELD has trained well and should get into the picture.

THIRD RACE—Sixteen 2-year-old fillies will match strides in the 5 furlongs of the third heat, with CHU CHU, from the H. P. Headley stable, as the logical choice. This fast-stepping daughter of Sir Barton bolted in the Debut Stakes, but has enough speed to lead this field to the wire. FLASH O'WHITE displayed a nice winning effort over a muddy strip last outing and should force the pace. FLUENT, from the F. Rucker barn, is preferred for the show.

FIFTH RACE—In the 1-mile gallop of the fifth event, eighteen 3-year-old fillies will contest the issue, with the claiming attached. SWEEP PAST will appreciate the fast track and if she runs back to her recent works will be hard to catch. UFORME, a surprise winner last start, is rounding to form and should finish in the runner-up position. RIDGEVIEW has disappointed in her efforts and may upset the calculations.

SIXTH RACE—The first route event of the card will bring together a field of twenty maiden 3-year-olds and upward, which will be dispatched over the mile and a sixteenth distance. PHANTASIME has not raced to his Maryland form, but rates the call over this band of platers. EAGLE BIRD and SCAPEGOAT should battle it out for the place. RUSHING and AERIE are outside possibilities.

SEVENTH RACE—In the concluding number another limit field of twenty of the older horses in training will be sent a mile and an eighth, with ROYAL MANAGER favored for the major award. STUPENDOUS is reliable and should gain the place, with AIMEE GOLDSMITH selected for the show.

FAVORITES SURVIVE IN CITY TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Shore's Play At Net Beats Latona

Mrs. Stone, Winner in Upset, Shows Tennis Skill.

Mangan Plays Judd in Anticipated Feature Today.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

PLAY in men's and women's singles and men's doubles maintained an even tenor yesterday on the courts at Sixteenth and Reservoir as the rapidly dwindling field moved one step closer to the several finals, to be staged Saturday and Sunday, with all their attendant silver trophies, freshly marked courts and pictures which make the featured stars resemble principals in any of the recent shootings.

The one disturbing element on the horizon, and that disturbing only from the point of view of the women participants, was the play of Mrs. Charles D. Stone, who, making her first appearance locally, downed Mrs. Margaret Graham, a semifinalist last year, in straight sets, 6—2, 7—5. Mrs. Stone proffered a stirring sort of game to the several odd spectators and promises to join the ranks of the other favorites now brandishing racquets in the ladies division.

Shore Steals Net From Latona.

Frank Shore, an important member in the small herd of dark horses in the men's division, blasted Anthony Latona off the court in their fourth round singles match yesterday, snatching the net away from the Western High player and keeping it. Shore beat Latona at Latona's own game, those tactics of advancing to volleying position behind sharply undercut shots.

Contrasted with the stirring play developed in this match was the drill in which Tom Mangan, veteran favorite, toned down Bill Seidel, 6—0, 6—1, in a match which went far toward proving the contention that tennis scores do not a correct picture make. Long, perfectly hit backcourt drives filled the match full of extended rallies and reasonably good play. Seidel frequently looked as though he was winning, but Mangan managed to win the final point of each game.

Mangan and Markey Show Form.

The newly formed combination of Mangan and Bud Markey showed good teamwork in their opening round setup victory yesterday. Seeded No. 1, and due to win the tournament, they will again be seen in action this afternoon as fourth round and quarterfinal round matches in men's and women's singles and the remnants of the earlier men's doubles rounds will be played, commencing at 3 o'clock.

Certainly the feature of today's play is the lone quarterfinal round match in the men's singles, bringing together Tom Mangan and Dean Judd.

Kirn Wins Football Medal at Annapolis

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—Midshipman Louis J. (Lou) Kirn, star half back of the Navy football team and mainspring of the attack during the last two seasons, today was adjudged the most proficient handlers of a football and will receive a silver medal offered by the Navy Athletic Association. Kirn amassed a total of 285 points in the competition which attracted more than a dozen gridiron knights and excited keen interest. J. H. Campbell, Little Rock, Ark., also a half back, was the runner-up with 283 points. The competition included eight different phases of handling the ball, including punting, placement and drop kicking, receiving punts and throwing and receiving forward passes, and receiving direct passes from formation.

Robert (Blimp) Bowstrom, captain and tackle, last season annexed honors in punting, which was his forte for two years, but Kirn and several other players picked up points along other lines.

Tech 9-1 Victim Of Maryland Frosh

Maryland freshmen baseballers marked up their ninth win in as many starts when they trounced Tech High, 9 to 1, yesterday afternoon at College Park. The Old Line yearlings now have defeated this season all of the District of Columbia public high school nines.

Ray Davidson and Steve Physiec, who divided the mound duties for Maryland, had the Tech batters at their mercy all the way, limiting the scholastics to six hits. The McKinley nine scored its lone run in the seventh on an error by Sothoron, which preceded hits by Levy and Russell.

Maryland got to Batson, Tech's bespectacled hurler for eleven hits, including three doubles and a triple.

HOSEI BEATS NAVY NINE BY 9 TO 4

Japanese Show Smart Baseball in Game at Annapolis.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 18.—The baseball team representing Hosei University of Japan was brilliant on the defense, hit hard in the pinches and took advantage of errors by the opposition to defeat the Navy Nine, 9 to 4 here today in one of the finest exhibitions of the current season. The visitors, who played heads up baseball all the way, meet Georgetown tomorrow.

The Nipponese finished strong to grasp what had been an outstanding duel with the lead swaying back and forth between the two teams. Suzuki, portsider of the Hosei Team, settled down after the early innings and aided by brilliant defensive play by nearly every member of the team, held the Midshipmen scoreless after the fifth.

Davenport Bothered by Smart Play.

Meanwhile "Dave" Davenport, lanky youngster, star of the Navy mound staff, was bothered continuously by the inside brand of ball flashed by the Far Easterners. At times they bunted to cross up in infield and nettled Davenport by their chatter and antics while on the hassocks.

Smart work at bat, classy fielding, together with their ability to skirt the paths in bewilding bursts of speed, were the main factors in the victory.

A large throng cheered the general play and team spirit of the Japanese. So frequent were sterling plays reeled off that the stands were kept in a continual round of palm crashing.

Navy put up a corking battle until the eighth frame, when they cracked wide open.

Japanese Nine to Play Georgetown Here Today

Georgetown University's Nine this afternoon will engage what is ranked as the champion college baseball team of Japan when the Hosei University team visits the Georgetown diamond, Thirty-ninth street and Reservoir road northwest. The game starts at 3:30 o'clock.

The Orientals yesterday showed some of the best baseball they have exhibited to date on their American tour when they defeated Navy at Annapolis, 9 to 4. Most of the complimentary things said of them in advance press notices were lived up to, and if such is the order for today Georgetown is down for one of its hardest games this season.

Harold Poole, Hilltop veteran pitcher, will face the Japanese from the box. He will be seeking his seventh victory of the season.

GRIMES GIVES INSIDE ON SMART PITCHING

the Polo Grounds as he talked, resting from the exertion of knocking out flies to the athletes before the third game of the series with the Giants.

"If you can pitch 20 wins in our league you're in the select circle," he went on. "There isn't much difference between getting 20 and 26 when you're throwing right. You can get famous by pitching those two and three hit games and striking out a dozen or so. But at the end of the season they add 'em up in the business office, and a 9-to-8 win counts just as much for you as the other fellows' shutouts. The only difference is that you've got something left."

Learns to Save Pitching Arm.

"That's what I mean by getting smart as you get older. You learn not to get all the pitching out of your arm with a lot of spectacular work in a couple of seasons. You're still in there when the ball kings and the strikeout wizards have blown right out of there."

HOOVER IS PLANNING FURTHER ECONOMIES

Will Discuss Cuts in Three Big Departments With Officials at Camp.

(Associated Press.)

Expenditures of three of the largest governmental departments—Treasury, Postoffice and Agriculture—came under scrutiny yesterday with a view to falling in line with President Hoover's economy program.

Officials from one of the three departments will be summoned to the Rapidan camp next week-end to discuss with President Hoover ways and means of effecting savings.

Already officials of two departments have been to the Rapidan. Two weeks ago the heads of the War Department decided abandonment of a number of obsolete posts would be the backbone of an economy program in the military branch of the Government.

Interior Department chiefs returned last night from the camp convinced that at least $17,000,000 could be saved within the next three years by postponement of nonessential capital outlays.

Faced with a Treasury deficit which has been growing rapidly during the last few months and a steadily declining income, President Hoover has mapped out a comprehensive plan for savings in the administrative departments.

Secretary Wilbur said yesterday no vitally important work in the Interior Department would be postponed and the efficiency of each branch would be kept intact.

Appropriations for Hoover Dam for 1931 and the next fiscal year amount to about $25,000,000, which is regarded by the reclamation service engineers to be more than can be spent efficiently during the period.

The National Park Service and Geological Survey have funds appropriated to be spent when matched by local communities or private enterprise. It is considered unlikely that much of this money will be matched immediately.

It was not known at the White House yesterday which of the three departments would be studied next week-end.

TO A LADY ABOUT TO FALL IN LOVE AGAIN:

STOP and reconsider, lady, is it worth the price you pay?
Worth the tears when you discover that your idol's feet are clay?
Think of all the fun you're having, with your heart unbound and free.
Would you toss away that freedom for some evanescent He?
Think before you do your falling, spend some time and retrospect.
History repeats, my darling; pause awhile and recollect.

ONE ERROR.

It happened in one of the big business offices. An executive rushed out into the corridor and, addressing a boy there, commanded, "Go over and get me a turkey sandwich and a pot of coffee right away!" Ten minutes later he came out and found the boy still there, empty-handed.

"Get out! You're through with this concern. We want no loafers of your type around here. Get your money and get out!"

"Who, me?" asked the boy.

"Yes, you!" barked the executive.

"I don't even work here," replied the boy. "I'm the boy from Glutzbaum & Glutzbaum."

VIEW TOWARD LABOR IS DECLARED BETTER

Gorman Says Virginia Strike Was Forced by Company and Not Workers.

Danville, Va., May 18 (A.P.).—Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers of America, said today that a more tolerant attitude toward union labor was noticeable throughout the South as a result of the Danville textile strike and the American Federation of Labor's Southern campaign.

Mr. Gorman, who had charge of the organization of textile workers in the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills here, spoke on the strike at the afternoon session of the Virginia State Federation of Labor.

He said the mills discriminated against union workers and that this was the reason for the calling of the strike. When the organization was assured there would be no further discrimination, Mr. Gorman said, the strike ended.

"The strike was not wanted by the employes," he said. "It was forced by the company."

Just prior to Mr. Gorman's address the federation refused to discuss the prohibition question or to oppose modification or repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Lynchburg local, No. 214, of the United Garment Workers, requested the federation to oppose modification or repeal.

Resolutions condemning President Hoover's veto of the Wagner unemployment bill and Secretary Doak's organization of an employment service in Virginia were passed by unanimous vote. Unanimous protest was voiced in another resolution of use by contractors of out-of-State labor on public works at lower wage scales than those prevailing in Virginia communities.

Mr. Gorman said the American Federation of Labor was working for a 48-hour week and that workers could have it through organization. Short hours, he said, mean good wages, while long hours mean low wages. He said a very prominent manufacturer had advocated the 48-hour week a short time ago in an address at the University of North Carolina.

Review Is Denied Man Suing Senator

Supreme Court Holds U. S. Lacks Jurisdiction in Indiana Action.

(Associated Press.)

William Rogers, of Indiana, was yesterday refused a review by the Supreme Court of a suit against Senator Watson, and a number of other residents of that State, seeking to recover from them damages of $50,000 for alleged persecution following testimony he gave before a Senate committee.

In October, 1926, Rogers appeared as a witness before the Reed Senate committee investigating alleged election frauds, and in his testimony asserted that Senator Watson, when he visited him here seeking an appointment in the Department of Justice, had exhibited a special Ku Klux Klan passport. Senator Watson denounced the statement as false in an interview given the newspapers, asserting he was not a member of that organization.

The Federal District Court dismissed the suit for want of jurisdiction, all parties to it being citizens of Indiana. The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals sustained that action. Rogers urged the Supreme Court to rule the controversy he had raised was within the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court; and to instruct the District Court to hear and decide it on its merits.

CHAIN STORE TAX IN INDIANA UPHELD

Supreme Court, 5 to 4, Says Businesses Differ From Independent Units.

(Associated Press.)

In a five-to-four decision, the Supreme Court yesterday upheld Indiana's chain store tax.

The law compels chain stores to pay more for operating than independent establishments. Lafayette A. Jackson, operating 223 stores in Indianapolis, brought suit, claiming the statute is unconstitutional.

Unusual attention was attracted to the case by protests on the growth of the chains and by similar attempts in other States to tax them. North Carolina's tax on chain stores is now pending before the court.

Justice Roberts said, in presenting the majority opinion, that the case hinged upon the power of the legislature to classify businesses, so long as its action is not unreasonable and arbitrary. He took the view that there is enough difference in chain stores and independent units to justify the Indiana law. Chief Justice Hughes, Justice Holmes, Justice Brandeis and Justice Stone agreed with him.

Justice Sutherland, in a dissenting opinion concurred in by Justices McReynolds, Van Devanter and Butler, held the law obviously is discriminatory, and added:

"The power to tax is the power to destroy; and this constitutes a reason why that power, however moderately exercised in given instances, should be jealously confined to the limits set by the Constitution."

"The problem of taxation is fundamental to the very existence of the Government of States," Justice Roberts said. "The fact that a statute discriminates in favor of a certain class does not make it arbitrary, if the discrimination is founded upon a reasonable distinction."
